Leaky Quadra Runs Home from Papa

From Big Seize-Up to Big Seas

By MARK DICKINSON

The $12,000,000 weather ship Quadra, with 95 aboard, has been dodging tragedy for the past five days, and Monday night coast guard officials were crossing their fingers and hoping she would reach port without further troubles this morning.

And as a result she was forced to leave Station Papa, 800 miles west of Victoria, two days ahead of schedule.

The ship is also running short of fuel for her engines and helium for weather balloons, according to district marine agent Larry Slaght. "We're keeping our fingers crossed," Mr. Slaght said. "We're having more than our fair share of problems."

Threat to the ship's propulsion occurred early Friday when a part of one turbo-generator seized up. But she cut in her standby generator and was still able to develop full power with the two units. "If one of those two breaks down, the ship could be in really serious trouble," Mr. Slaght said.

A few hours after the engine trouble hit the Quadra,

Friday's storm smashed through her patrol area. Forty-foot waves and 55-mile-an-hour winds battered the vessel, causing the leaks in her superstructure and sending her more than 150 miles off her station.

The superstructure leaks let water into the electrical control system, but the extent of the damage is not yet known here, Mr. Slaght said.

Because of rough seas, the Quadra was forced to steam westerly into the storm.

"She could not turn around in those waves," he said.

"This caused her to get out of her patrol area and use up a lot of fuel."

He said he did not know the

New-Heart Patient 'Feeling Better'

Patient's Wife Saw Accident

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—The wife of heart transplant man Louis Washkansky paused to watch a highway accident Saturday without knowing the heart of one of the victims would be used for her husband.

By a strange twist of fate, Mrs. Washkansky saw the accident that killed 25-year-old Denise Ann Darvall whose heart was used by surgeons shortly after she died in the historic transplant operation.

Mrs. Washkansky was on her way home Saturday from the Grootte Schuur Hospital here after visiting her husband.

CAPE TOWN (AP)—The South African with a transplanted heart said he was "feeling much better" and sipped his first fluids Monday about 38 hours after his operation.

Doctors warned, however, a crucial period is expected by the week's end. See Page 13. Grootte Schuur Hospital said that Louis Washkansky, 55, had his first drink by mouth at 2 p.m. He was allowed such fluids as water, orange drink and milk. A doctor said he will be put on a light diet of soup and soft-boiled egg today.

FLUID FLOW

Washkansky underwent the operation Sunday, receiving the transplanted heart of Denise Ann Darvall, 25, fatally injured in an automobile accident the day before. Her heart was kept "alive" for three hours with a flow of fluid until the operation. The hospital's heart surgery registrar, Dr. S. C. W. Bosman, said: "He is gaining ground. All is going as well as any open heart operation can behave."

FIRST WORDS

Earlier in the day, Washkansky spoke his first words since the operation. He said: "I am feeling much better. What kind of an operation did I have? You promised me a new heart."

Prof. Christian Barnard, who led the 30-man surgical team that performed the transplant, told him: "You have a new heart."

A respirator which aids his breathing was removed, permitting Washkansky to speak.

GOOD CONDITION

Prof. Jan. H. Louw of Cape Town University's medical school, said Washkansky's condition is good after what was described as the first human heart transplant in medical history.

The patient's temperature, pulse and blood pressure were normal, his condition was better than expected and he slept well Sunday night, Louw reported.

Washkansky's heart had been so bad that he had not been expected to live long.

The transplanted heart was in good condition, Louw said, and

Insulin Trial Charge:

Husband Hid Dying Wives

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The prosecution in the insulin murder trial of William Dale Archerd charged Monday he hid three of his wives suffering from insulin shock until it was too late to save them.

In the first day of the trial, prosecutor Raymond Daniels also said Archerd was well acquainted with the dangers of insulin because of his work as an attendant in a state mental hospital.

The silver-haired grandfather, 55, is accused of the insulin deaths of two of his seven wives and a 15-year-old nephew by giving them massive injections of the drug normally used in the treatment of diabetes.

He also is a suspect in the alleged insulin deaths of three other persons, including another wife, which occurred outside Los Angeles County.

The prosecution's attempt to prove insulin was the death weapon is the first such legal effort in the United States.

Daniels, in his opening statement to Judge Adolph Alexander who is trying the case without a jury, said Archerd worked in the insulin shock ward at Canarillo State Hospital, and during a period from 1939 to 1941 was taught the dangers of the drug.

The prosecutor also said he intended to display records from the hospital which would show Archerd actually injected the drug into other attendants experimentally.

Daniels said Zella Winders Archerd, 48, the defendant's fourth wife; Juanita Plam Archerd, 46, his fifth wife, and novelist Mary Brinker Post Arden, 60, his seventh wife, were secreted or hidden away

DIVORCE BILL UNVEILED

Breakdown Listed Among Grounds

OTTAWA (CP)—A bill that makes marriage breakdown grounds for divorce won enthusiastic first reading in the Commons Monday night.

Adultery, bigamy, physical or mental cruelty, and sodomy, bestiality, rape and homosexuality are listed in the bill as specific grounds.

In addition, either husband or wife when living apart may petition for divorce on the grounds that there has been a permanent breakdown in their marriage.

However, marriage breakdown must be proved in the courts, Justice Minister Trudeau said.

The breakdown must be based on one of the following circumstances:

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than three of the five years prior to the petition;

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than two years prior to the petition but on a sentence of death or more than 10 years, with the appeal process exhausted;

● The respondent has for not less than three years before the petition been "grossly addicted to alcohol or a narcotic" without reasonable expectation of rehabilitation;

● The petitioner hasn't heard from or has been unable to locate the partner for three years;

● The petitioner has refused to consummate the marriage or has been unable to because of illness or disability for at least one year;

● The couple has been separated for at least five years because of desertion of the petitioner;

The couple has been separated for any other reason for not less than three years.

A barrage of complimentary speeches followed introduction of the bill by Trudeau, a 46-year-old Montreal bachelor.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) said the minister has

'Nothing Moving'

Record Snowfall Hits Fredericton

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fredericton was crippled with record 25 inches of snow Monday, while other sections of New Brunswick escaped with a less severe pounding from a province-wide storm.

"There's nothing moving here except a few damn fools," said a member of the Fredericton police department.

The police spokesman said snow removal would probably not get started until early today.

RCMP said their cars would remain off roads Monday night unless there was an emergency.

BOY KILLED

One person was known to have died as a result of the storm. Five-year-old Michael McGraw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valmond McGraw of the Gloucester County community of Losier Settlement, died when he stepped into the path of a car on a storm-swept highway near his home.

Air Canada cancelled all flights there and at Saint John.

Negroes Held Hostage

DETROIT (AP)—A distraught Negro whose son was killed during Detroit's summer race riot armed himself Monday and held two women, one of them pregnant, and three children as hostages in his home. All the hostages were Negro.

Police surrounded the home of Eugene Ector, who they said had fired several shots before they arrived.

William Watson, a retired Detroit policeman, said he spoke with Ector on the phone.

REMINDERS

"The sight of the police cars upset him," said Watson, 50, a veteran of 25 years on the police force. "He said 'they remind me of my son.'"

Ector's son, Herman, 30, was shot and killed on July 24, one of the 43 persons who died in the July race riot. Murder charges were filed against a private guard in connection with the shooting of the younger Ector.

Some 30 policemen surrounded Ector's home and ordered cars in the area to turn off their lights. No lights were visible in Ector's house.

Brownies Help to Give Joy

The spirit of Christmas wore a Brownie uniform last week, as a group of elfin girls decided what they would give rather than what they wanted for Christmas.

They took their treasures and sold them so that children without treasures will know on Christmas Day that there is joy in the world.

clothes, games, candy and popcorn — items they had donated themselves.

Monday they brought $25 in to the Colonist 500 Fund.

The donation was made up of pennies, nickels and dimes and Victoria's needy will be glad of every cent.

It was part of $432 brought into the office — nearly $1 on every cheque which will go out on Christmas Eve to 500 people on Victoria's special gift list.

What can the money mean to the people who get the cheques?

For one woman, alone with eight children, it means something for the Christmas table.

"I got a cheque one year," she said. "It came as a complete surprise for me on Christmas Eve."

"I got some last-minute things for Christmas and Boxing Day.

"I'd bought the children some small, very practical gifts, and neglected some small bills to do it."

Her children range in age from seven to 17.

"We've been on social assistance for six years, now."

This leaves the station unmanned for two days.

"We're all used to not having too much, but at first it was terribly hard, and I don't know how we survived."

"We shall have a good Christmas this year, because I want it to be that way. We've learned to have fun, although I know the children would love to have a present, just once, that isn't something they would have to have anyway."

"We've all learned that despair and sadness don't make any difference to your circumstances, except for making other people want to stay away from you."

Tests Advisable for Dyslexia If Children Highly Intelligent

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: Please discuss dyslexia in highly intelligent children. What can be done for these children and where should we turn for help? There seems to be a lack of acceptance, knowledge, advice or training for this problem in my city on the part of both educators and physicians. It is difficult for us to decide what to do for our son, 11, now that the problem is finally diagnosed. — Mrs. F.P.

Dyslexia is an inability to read understandingly or easily. Since the problem has been diagnosed, I am surprised that appropriate referral has not been made — you live in a metropolitan area that should have suitable facilities.

Perhaps if I knew more of the circumstances of this case I could do more to resolve the question. As it is, I must rely on conjecture. Is it possible that you have a diagnosis of dyslexia without yet having had the causes of it analysed? This is a must.

Dyslexia, you see, is not a specific "disease" for which a specific treatment can be applied. It is, rather, a problem which may be resulting from one of a number of causes, or even from a combination of causes.

Study of the case would involve analysis of eyesight, hearing, IQ or other evaluations of intelligence, and sometimes other tests.

Since you specify dyslexia in highly intelligent children, I would take it for granted that this boy's IQ has been tested and it is high. Knowing that would limit the possibilities. Is there a physical condition in-olved? Tests must be made to find out.

Or, alternatively, is an emotional, neurological or "mental" condition involved? There is no reason why a person of high intelligence cannot develop an emotional illness. It happens. Psychiatric treatment is, therefore, the answer in such a case.

FURTHER ANALYSIS

Either your physician or the school system should be able to make arrangements for further analysis of the boy's problem, and only after that has been done can you or anyone else know what should be done for him.

A child guidance centre would be one obvious place to go for help in accomplishing such tests. It is possible that a rehabilitation institute might be equipped for a problem such as this.

You might not be satisfied to accept a "diagnosis of dyslexia," and expect treatment to follow. The cause of the dyslexia has to be discovered.

Breakdown Among Divorce Grounds

given a Christmas present to the "500,000 people the Canadian Bar Association says are living in common law marriages."

FORCED DRAFT

Many would be able to legalize their relationships, Peters said. He was among the MPs who a few years ago blocked the passage of divorce bills through Parliament to force drafting of new legislation.

Ron Basford (L-Vancouver-Burrard), who was co-chairman with 80-year-old Senator Arthur Roebuck of a special parliamentary committee on divorce, described it as "an historic night."

FIRST READING

It took the Commons about 80 minutes to adopt unanimously the resolution introducing the bill and give it first reading.

The legislation will require the courts to look into the possibility of reconciliation. A marriage counsellor "or some other suitable person" may be named by the court in an attempt to head off a divorce.

Jurisdiction for divorce cases will reside in the trial divisions of the Supreme Courts of Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Alberta; the Supreme Courts of British Columbia and Prince Edward Island; the Court of Queen's Bench in Manitoba and Saskatchewan; and the Territorial Courts of the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

DIVORCE DIVISION

A special divorce division of the Exchequer Court of Canada will be established to deal with Quebec, which now must go through the Senate.

However, Quebec may later issue a proclamation declaring its Superior Court to be the one to handle divorce cases and Newfoundland may do the same, naming its Supreme Court.

RESIDENTIAL DEMAND

The petitioner or respondent must have lived in the province where the appeal for divorce is made for at least one year immediately before the appeal.

MORE

Trudeau placed emphasis upon the fact that grounds for divorce must be proved.

New Heart

required only a single shock to start it beating after being transplanted during the five-hour operation.

Rejection of the heart by Washkansky's body was the greatest danger now, doctors reported. Louw said drugs were being administered to lessen the chances of such a rejection.

The most serious possibility of rejection will come at the end of a week, he added. "This is the crucial time for the success of the operation. He may not show any effects, but this is the time when we will get a bit anxious."

"As this is the first operation of its kind, there are many questions that are unanswered and this is one of them. We must meet them as they arise."

Washkansky, a Lithuanian-born Cape Town businessman, could be kept alive on a heart-lung machine if the transplant is rejected, said one specialist, but only for 24 hours at the most.

"If the heart is rejected by the patient, we are at the point of no return," the specialist added.

AGE GAP

The 30-year gap in ages between donor and receiver makes no difference, said Prof. Christian Barnard, who led the surgical team that performed the transplant at Groote Schuur Hospital.

Three years of research with animals preceded the operation. "This research was to work out a technique," Barnard said.

"Once we decided we had this worked out, we felt we could do a transplant on a human. . . . He realized that the donor would probably have to be a victim of a motor accident."

"I think a cheer went up in the operating theatre when we gave the heart a shock and it started."

'ARCHAIC LAWS'

"The archaic divorce laws we have had have caused untold misery to Canadians," he said. "The government hoped to negotiate with the provinces in this area."

Brewin was disappointed that the government had not accepted the argument that marriage breakdown alone should be the grounds for divorce. The years, granting divorce would be "unduly harsh or unjust" to either party or hurt arrangements for maintenance of either one. The latter apparently is aimed at cases where separation has been caused by illness.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield was among the first members welcoming the new legislation.

"We all approve of reform of the divorce law."

Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto-Greenwood) said it is a "relief and pleasure" to be in Parliament for reform of the divorce law.

'ARCHAIC LAWS'

"The archaic divorce laws we have had have caused untold misery to Canadians," he said. "The government hoped to negotiate with the provinces in this area."

Brewin was disappointed that the government had not accepted the argument that marriage breakdown alone should be the grounds for divorce. The United Church of Canada and other major groups had favored this approach.

Howard Johnston (SC-Okanagan-Revelstoke) said introduction of the measure will cause a "flutter of hope" to many across Canada and draw general agreement.

Robert McCleave (PC-Hallifax) said he hoped there would be a free vote on each of the proposed new grounds for divorce. He suggested one additional ground should be "where the wife is a practising lesbian."

Makarios Backs Peace Bid

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus Monday joined Greek and Turkish leaders in accepting UN Secretary-General Thant's proposals for averting war over the Mediterranean island republic.

The Cypriot president called for the complete withdrawal of Greek and Turkish troops from Cyprus and for UN Security Council action to bar any military intervention.

Greece and Turkey had accepted the proposals soon after they were presented Sunday, including Thant's appeal for withdrawal of Greek and Turkish forces above the levels prescribed in the 1960 Cyprus independence agreements. Thant described such withdrawals as the first step in a long-term settlement.

Thant also had suggested that "it might be considered desirable" to enlarge the responsibilities of the UN peace force on the island to help prevent bloodshed between the bitterly antagonistic Greek and Turkish-Cypriot populations.

Diplomats here expected the 15-nation Security Council to meet next week to consider broader responsibilities for the UN force, including possible reinforcement of the force that now numbers 4,500, including 900 Canadians.

The Cyprus independence agreement of 1960 provided for the presence of 950 Greek troops and 850 Turkish soldiers on the island. But the Greeks are reported in some quarters to have 8,000 to 12,000 men there while Turkish forces are estimated at 1,200.

Although all three governments concerned now have accepted Thant's proposal, there were hints from Turkish sources that Turkey would not reduce its forces below the levels prescribed in the 1960 agreement as urged by Makarios.

However, Premier Constantine Kollias of Greece and Premier Suleyman Demirel of Turkey said in their acceptance that they were ready to act "expeditiously" on the cutback of forces on Cyprus.

Wilson Considers Peace Overtures

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson was reported Monday planning talks with U.S. President Johnson next month on the Vietnamese war and other world problems. He also may meet Soviet Premier Kosygin if he thinks peace prospects might be improved.

Vietnam might lead to a meaningful exchange.

William F. Bundy, U.S. assistant secretary for Far East affairs, said on a BBC television program that the question of a Christmas truce is under study in Washington. But he added that such pauses in the past failed to lead to peace talks because of North Vietnam's negative attitude.

TRUCE WORD
Qualified informants disclosed this as a rash of comment from Communist sources suggested ways of getting peace talks started. A Soviet official in London said peace talks could open if the United States halted the bombing of North Vietnam permanently.

VISIT IN CARDS
Informants in London said no formal arrangements have been made for the Johnson-Wilson meeting but a visit by the prime minister to Washington next month is in the cards.

Wilson may subsequently visit Moscow if he feels an encounter with Kosygin might advance prospects for Vietnam peace-making.

UN-Action Course Steered by U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The possibility of a U.S. move to secure United Nations peace action on Vietnam has increased in recent days, U.S. officials said Monday.

They said the likelihood the United States would press the UN Security Council to try to find a way to peace was greater than before because of two factors:

• The unanimous adoption by the Senate last week of a resolution urging President Johnson to make every reasonable effort to get UN action on the conflict.

• The disclosure that the National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong, had sounded out U. Thant on the possibility of coming to New York to try to propagandize on behalf of their position.

Shell Finds Destroyer

Cong Start Big Blaze

LONG BINH, South Vietnam (UPI) — Fire touched off by Viet Cong saboteurs using rockets destroyed huge quantities of asphalt and other non-critical material Monday in a daring attack on the U.S. supply complex at Long Binh 15 miles north of Saigon.

billowed 1,000 feet into the night sky and the flames raged out of control for most of the day. About 40,000 drums were stored in the fire zone.

There were no American casualties, but damage was extensive.

Elsewhere Monday, North Vietnamese gunners put a round into the deck of the U.S. Navy destroyer Ozbourn, killing two sailors and wounding three.

The Ozbourn took her hit while patrolling the North Vietnamese coast 22 miles north of Dong Hoi. The shell crashed through the deck and exploded in a compartment below. The navy said, however, the ship remained fully operational.

Plane Crashes Into Suburb

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Soviet military plane crashed into the south Budapest residential suburb of Erdlyi, killing all the crew and two persons on the ground, the Hungarian news agency MTI announced.

Several houses were damaged. It said, and the crash site was reported cordoned off by police. The cause of the crash was being investigated.

On Disaster Course

MOST CANADIANS are awaiting impatiently the statement by Treasury Minister E. J. Benson in which he will show how government expenses are being trimmed for the forthcoming year.

Until that happens not much sense can be made of the mini-budget presented last week by Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp.

If all departmental chiefs like Miss Judy LaMarsh say they will fight like a mother cat for their kittens against any cutting of their departmental expenditures, there can be little hope for Mr. Benson. There can also be little hope for Mr. Sharp cutting the enormity of his estimated deficit.

The question now being asked is why did Mr. Sharp not do the complete job at once instead of leaving the really important part of the treasury business to his associate? The success of the operation depends upon the expenditure just as much as the revenue plans.

Arnold Hart, president of the Bank of Montreal, at the annual meeting of the bank in Montreal this week laid it clearly on the line that the government was running a disaster course, and that rigorous action is required by governments at all levels, not just to moderate the extraordinary rapid rate of increase in expenditure, but to restrain it sufficiently to restore a more reasonable balance between the private and public sectors of the economy.

The president's figures that the growth of government expenditure has risen from a 6 per cent per annum level to 11 per cent in 1965 and 16 per cent by 1966, pinpoint the danger.

They prove conclusively that the growth of expenditure is moving far faster than the country's national production, and for this there can be only one end—a less competitive position in world trading, and this to Canada, an exporting nation, is vital.

The onus at the moment is on Mr. Benson. He has to come up with some realistic cuts even if it is over the dead bodies of Miss LaMarsh and other departmental chiefs. The task is not an easy one when revenue-hungry ministers form a majority in the cabinet.

A Challenger

LAST WEEK a comparatively unknown U.S. senator from Minnesota, Eugene McCarthy, announced that he will challenge President Johnson in state contests for the Democratic Party nomination for the presidency on the issue of the Vietnam war.

His decision to enter the national political lists against the president as an anti-war candidate indicates how far discontent over the present administration's policy has split the rank and file of the Democratic Party over the past year.

Though it was New York Senator Robert Kennedy who sparked the Democratic Party's "dumb Johnson" drive, Senator McCarthy—by throwing his hat into the primaries in some half-dozen states—is the first to publicly attest that he is out to do just that.

By acting now while his potential party rivals are still playing the waiting game and by seizing a popular cause, Senator McCarthy might have gained a lasting advantage.

Certainly he will be criticized by many members of his own party for his action and will undoubtedly be accused of undermining its strength throughout the country. Yet it has become increasingly obvious that President Johnson's Vietnam policies have led to a wave of uneasiness and despair across the nation.

Senator McCarthy should not be written off yet.

Herald of Friction

THE ALARM OF Alaska's Governor Walter Hickel over reports that the Soviet Union will set off large underwater explosions near the Aleutian Islands heralds some of the difficulties that lie ahead if the nations of the world cannot come to some sort of accord on actual exploitation of ocean-bottom resources.

In this case the powerful blasts will be used to test the sea floor and help determine its geological structure. There have been similar activities by the United States in northern waters, and no doubt the information gleaned will be useful ultimately not to these two countries alone but to the world.

Governor Hickel's worry is about the possible effects on fisheries and other marine resources so close to his state. How much more reason to be concerned would he have, however, if—as perhaps will be possible within a few years—the Russians or anyone else were moving in to mine the ocean bed, in international waters but in even closer proximity.

Here almost certainly is a future source of friction among nations unless rules can be devised for the sharing of the abyssal riches. This is the aim to which a committee of the United Nations has been turning its attention. But such are the complexities that it seems extremely unlikely that the international law will come before the technology of ocean-bottom exploitation.

Post Office Goes Red

Just because red is the traditional Christmas color—the color in which Santa invariably appears—the Post Office has printed its main Christmas stamp, the one for three cents which is used for Christmas cards, in that color.

It is not an unattractive stamp with three youngsters caroling in the foreground of the Peace Tower and a snow-covered Christmas tree.

The trouble is that the regular four-cent stamp—the one used for all local letters—is also in exactly the same shade of red, and although the design is different, the stamp at a distance is very easily confusable with the special Christmas three-cent stamp.

To the older people, and those whose sight is not 20-20, they could easily be mistaken, one for the other. It also seems that to the mail sorters, the similarity of the two stamps is going to create eye strain and perhaps a slowing down in the operation.

To many it may be a small matter, but to others it is another example of the sloppy type of thinking which unfortunately seems to prevail in all too many government operations.

Continuing Brutalities Breed Hatreds As Arab and Israeli Trade in Violence

By DAVID HOLDEN from Jerusalem

"YOU know, I was a very moderate Arab. Before the fifth of June I used to say the Jews were only human beings after all. I never believed till then that these people who were persecuted so much and deserved so much sympathy could be so much when they were on top. Now, I just hate their guts."

The speaker was a Christian Arab, educated and experienced in the hard ways of the world. His voice was low, his eyes looked very close to tears. He said he meant—unusual for an Arab—everything he said.

After several days on the west bank of the Jordan, trying to discover what is going on there under Israeli occupation, it is his words that stick most firmly in my memory, voicing the terrible inevitability of Arab hatred. It will need something close to a miracle to banish such a feeling. There are no miracles being worked in the Holy Land today.

If anything, the gulf between Arab and Israeli seems deeper now than it was before. To most Israelis this is a matter for regret, for in the position of master they can afford some generous emotions. To many Arabs it is the last refuge of self-respect.

Defeated, humbled, occupied, made to eat their stupid boasts and futile gestures, they are subdued but implacable. They have drawn into themselves, as the vanquished do, yet they look at the world with eyes that are still full of pride, because they can still hate, and unhappily, the Israelis—like most conquerors—give them plenty of reasons for doing so.

To hear some of the Arabs tell it, lapsing into their usual hyperbole, you might think, indeed, that the Israelis were the new Nazis, bent on genocide. They are not, and it is lucky that there are responsible Arabs who can still recognize that, at least, through the mists of their emotion.

But the Israelis are exceedingly tough and they are almost embarrassingly frank about it. "If you know the Arab mentality," said the official spokesman for the west bank's military commander, Gen. Uzi Nardias, "you know this toughness is probably good. I don't think they really understand any other language."

A white South African could hardly have sounded more uncompromising about the Kaffirs. Yet, however unfortunate was the spokesman's choice of words (and in fairness I must record that I never heard anyone else express their private thoughts quite this way) the Israelis have their own justification: their very existence is at stake, they say.

Since June, there have been 75 incidents of sabotage or shooting, chiefly in the occupied areas of Gaza and the West Bank, attributed to the guerrillas known as "Al Fatah" who are believed to come from Syria.

Twelve Israelis have been killed and 48 wounded, in addition to more than another 100 killed in sporadic border clashes and military engagements like the sinking of the Eilat. If Israel is to survive, the Arabs must be taught that such violence cannot pay. Reprisals are therefore swift and massive.

Houses are blown up and men arrested with remarkable expedition. On Nov. 7, for example, near a village called Sheikh, in the Hebron district, ten armed men were caught in a cave by Israeli soldiers. Seven were killed, three captured. The next day, the Israelis razed nine houses in Sheikh, damaged 40 or 50 others by the blasts, and arrested eight men of the village, including two of the three headmen and the head teacher of the school on suspicion of helping Al Fatah.

General Narkiss told me that arrests had been found in six of the houses and all the arrested men had been incriminated by evidence found on the men in the cave. The villagers told me they had no arms and knew none of the alleged guerrillas.

I do not know who is telling the truth, but 24 hours seems a short time in which to assess it, and meanwhile at least nine families are left homeless and possibly destitute.

This sort of thing has happened in many other places. Two months ago, in a village a few miles from Jerusalem, five houses were blown up because one Arab fired three or four ill-directed shots from one of them. In three refugee camps around Nablus two weeks ago, 200 men were arrested with the aid of hooded searchers who were supposed to be informers.

In Gaza, according to UNRWA sources that I believe to be reliable, 144 inhabited houses in a refugee camp that was excavated under UNRWA supervision contained 23 bodies.

One Israeli official acknowledged privately that the security forces were even tougher in Gaza than on the West Bank. This seems to be reflected in the high rate of Arab departures from there to Jordan now at 200 a day.

Along the Jordan River it seems to be generally accepted that about 200 Arabs have been shot in attempting night crossings.

In Qalqiya, where 40 per cent of the houses were destroyed after the war, some of the people have also returned to live under makeshift roofs in ruined homes.

Israel officials themselves admit they make mistakes. Disarmingly, they say, "We are not supermen," and they point out that military occupations are apt to be nasty for the occupied. But to the Arabs, inevitably, every act of violence or intimidation seems part of a Zionist master plan to drive still more of them out of their homeland.

This belief, inflamed enough at the best of times, is further aggravated by Israeli toughness, or tactlessness, in civil matters. The beginnings of four new kibbutzim in the occupied territories is alarming enough, even though Mr. Eshkol's government has so far resisted strong pressure from extremists in Israel to open the gates to more.

But still more worrying to the Arabs is the fact that so few of the summer's refugees have been allowed to return. On a juggling of the figures, tens of thousands who have asked to return have been refused permission, including all men of military age, all refugees from Jerusalem and Jericho, and nearly all refugees of the class of '48 who fled in June for a second time.

At the same time, an Israeli government spokesman is taking over all the property in Arab Jerusalem and the West Bank owned by people who are now "absent" whether or not they have applied to return and whether or not they fled in fear or just happened to be out of the country when the June war began.

Claims to caretaker rights in absentee property by relatives or legal partners are rejected on the grounds that they could lead to disputes if the absentees eventually return. No such Military Budget Waste of Money?

By GREG CONNOLLEY, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

CANADA'S contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is coming under searching examination that could lead to reduction, or Canadian forces.

The government declares it will continue to make its presence felt in the NATO forces in Europe.

But the withdrawal of substantial numbers of American and British troops from Germany gives Canada a precedent if she decides to cut down on her military numbers abroad.

Canada maintains a mechanized infantry brigade group of 6,500 men in Germany along with 5,000 men in six Starfighter squadrons which have a nuclear strike role.

The argument being heard is that conditions have changed in Europe—that the Soviet Union is no longer as aggressive and that West Germany has its own powerful forces.

There is also the cost factor. Taxpayers lay out $150 million a year to maintain the troops overseas.

The question is raised, too, that in any war in Europe the Canadian forces there would be sacrificed in the first onslaughts by the Soviet Union, whether in nuclear or conventional war.

A new argument put forth in the House of Commons currently is that the money spent on the armed forces overseas should be devoted to social welfare in Canada.

T. C. Douglas, leader of the socialist New Democratic party, has expressed concern that the government is going to postpone the national medicare scheme because it is short of money.

He argued there was no prospect of military aggression by the Soviet Union in Europe. Therefore he concluded Canada could take its military out of Germany.

Mr. Douglas even wanted Canada to cut back its contribution to the North American Air Defence agreement (NORAD). He proposed that the government cancel its $250 million program for the construction of 115 CF-5 ground-support jets.

Other parliamentarians have questioned the usefulness of Canada's current military role. The Conservative party objected strongly to unification of the Canadian army, navy and air force, now in full swing.

Former Conservative defence minister Douglas Harkness says unification has destroyed service morale. He also questioned the new concept for the unified forces of a 110,000-man, highly trained mobile force which could be used for military or peace-keeping operations.

Indeed, Mr. Harkness' disenchanted with United Nations peace-keeping duties for Canada is shared by many Canadians following unhappy experiences in the Middle East and Cyprus.

The burden of defending Canada's military commitments abroad falls on External Affairs Minister Paul Martin. He says bluntly that dismemberment of NATO's forces in Europe at this time would be risky.

He suggests that a withdrawal might excite again "Russia's appetite for expansion."

Mr. Martin is also concerned that West Germany, if left alone, might decide to acquire nuclear weapons rather than sign the non-proliferation treaty.

These, he believes, are good and sufficient reasons for a representation in Europe.

But the external affairs minister has not excluded the prospect that the Canadian contribution may be scaled down.

Disconsolate Husbands

From The Ottawa Journal

IN slower times market day was a great event for the whole family but supermarkets have changed all the old patterns. Trading slowly, once a prime marketplace function, has been replaced by frozen faces inspecting frozen dinners while faint musk bubbles around cellophane packages.

Husbands seem the most disconsolate in this merry atmosphere, following their wives and pushing shopping carts as though chained to them. Then there's the one-handed pusher who holds a transistor radio in the other hand, listening to the football game his wife overruled. Another brand of supermarket husband is the gourmet. He makes straight for the delicatessen counter and gathers up bottles of pickled walnuts, peaches in grenadine and such until his wife finds him. He makes him drop these goodies and leads him down a prosaic aisle of canned vegetables.

Opposed to these types, one encounters the sophisticated young bachelor, shopping with his girlfriend for their weekly candlelight steak dinner. The girl, out to impress her prospective husband with feminine know-how, plucks a juicy sirloin up and weighs it thoughtfully in her hand. He weighs her in this domestic role with a rapid gaze. But once a husband, he'll join those dazed spouses, stare at the gourmet counter and cry at the cash register. That's the way the cookie crumbles!

Deadline: Europe

Visitor Impressed By U.S. Planners

By OTTO VON HABSBURG

I HAVE just spent a few days in America, attending a conference of young technicians and managers of industrial enterprises. The meeting, which attracted a sizeable number of selected persons, was called to study the technical, economic and political future.

The greatest impression for a European was the completely relaxed way in which these men dealt with the years ahead. In a strictly scientific spirit, the most modern practices of prospective studies were used to explore the coming decades.

When one sees these dynamic leaders dealing in billions of dollars and in expected, though as yet not materialized, inventions, one thinks with anxiety of the narrow-mindedness that all too often prevails in Europe. We fight over olive oil or beef, we endanger the progress of our continent for petty prestige reasons while the world of tomorrow emerges. Here we had in real life that "American Challenge" of which Servan Schreiber has written. It is not the consequence of sinister plans hatched by our partners across the Atlantic; it is the inevitable consequence of our weakness, of our lack of imagination, vision and courage.

Another fact, also significant, is the almost unanimous support for Washington's foreign policy on the part of these men of the future.

Of course many criticized one or another aspect of the White House's international activity. But on fundamentals there is an impressive consensus. Let us not be mistaken: those who demand the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam—the Fulbrights, McCarthys and Morges—do not represent the country.

They speak for a noisy minority, which has little hope of imposing its views in the foreseeable future.

Finally, the spiritual factor was not forgotten in these generally quite practical discussions. The young managers have a deep religious anxiety, a passionate interest for all transcendental matters; this was definitely not the case in the preceding generation. Hours were spent in discussing the future of religion and the influence of spiritual forces. From this point of view no difference existed between Catholics, Protestants or Jews. There is an atmosphere of religious rebirth, whose importance is obvious to anyone acquainted with history.

These are the main impressions brought back from a meeting with representatives of the young American generation, at least the one that works and hence has no time to protest in the streets. We see a solid foundation that is much more significant than the up and down of President Johnson's popularity or the question of who will be the Republican nominee in 1968.

Montreal was put under martial law 130 years ago today—in 1837—although Louis Joseph Papineau, leader of the rebellion, had fled to the United States. Climate Uncertain

NATO Faces Crucial Decisions

By ARCH MacKENZIE, from Washington

The semi-annual ministerial meeting of NATO in Brussels next week is perhaps as important for the future of the alliance as any ever held.

Some earth-shaking prospects face NATO, which for the last year has been drafting ways to expand its political role in Europe.

But there is a general climate of uncertainty around NATO and some special problems inside. President de Gaulle is the extreme example of the atmosphere.

The French president, on the basis of last week's utterances, may well plan to cut loose France altogether. Dean Acheson, former U.S. secretary of state, said Sunday that de Gaulle is consistent and that he believes France's departure can be expected, with nothing to be done about it. France would give a year's notice next year and depart in 1969, as the NATO house rules permit.

But Europe itself is preoccupied and rapport with the U.S. busy in Vietnam, has deteriorated.

Others besides France seem increasingly to fear the American economic and technological invasion. Belgium recently barred any further foreign takeovers of its businesses. Prime Minister Wilson, in another carrot for British entry to the European Common Market — which de Gaulle blocks — spoke out against the hazard of the American presence.

On the other hand, the U.S. has gained considerable European support, France excluded, in combating the speculative attack on the dollar which followed British devaluation.

There remain other differences about how strongly East-West accord should be pursued and how much NATO should be bent toward such accord.

Within NATO, the near-war between Turkey and Greece has been a blow.

And what is going to happen to U.S. policy after Robert McNamara, a NATO strongman for nearly seven years, retires as defence secretary? It was McNamara who replaced the concept of massive nuclear retaliation with that of the flexible response. Prompted by complaints from the other 14 members, McNamara formed a special committee to improve consultation on nuclear policy.

There is the question whether the U.S. troop commitment to Europe will remain unweakened, and whether Britain's economic problems mean an end to the British Army on the Rhine.

Last and by no means least is the shadow of the new missile race with the Soviet Union and the U.S. decision to start a $5,000,000,000 missile defence system — officially as a shield against Chinese missiles of the 1970s. Canada has refused to join in this system.

Military-minded U.S. congressmen already are pushing for export of the missile defence to NATO.

African Trial May Stir Bitter UN Controversy

By LOUIS B. FLEMING, from United Nations

The trial of 35 alleged African terrorists in South Africa is expected to trigger a bitter international controversy in the UN General Assembly this week.

Behind the story are echoes of Vietnam, charges of torture, evidence of extraordinary legal procedures and a challenge to the authority of the United Nations itself.

In the proceedings, 35 Africans from the mandated territory of South-west Africa are being tried in South Africa on charges which bear a maximum penalty of death.

The controversy itself centres on a variety of curious aspects:

- The defendants face the death penalty under a law which was enacted while they were in prison.

- Action against them by South Africa is in defiance of the General Assembly resolution last year terminating the mandate over South-west Africa which had been given to South Africa by the League of Nations, but the legality of the UN assembly action is untested.

- There are unconfirmed reports that the defendants were subjected to torture in an effort by South African authorities to uncover what appeared to be a major plot to stir insurrection in the Ovamboland section of South-west Africa.

- Legal action against the terrorists is the first major action of its sort to stem what assertedly is a "liberation" campaign sponsored by the Organization of African Unity. South Africans, therefore, have argued that they have as much right to use extraordinary legal proceedings to exercise what they regard as self defence as South Vietnam has to use American military force on its own defence.

The trial begun last September, is now in recess, but will resume Dec. 14 to hear final arguments. The judgment of the court is expected early next year.

Diplomats here are planning a major debate this week when the assembly takes up the South-west Africa question.

Agriculture, Wildlife May Suffer Long After War Ends

U.S. Scientists Attack Defoliation

CP, from Washington

Among the "firsts" recorded in the Vietnam war is the use of plant-killing chemicals since 1961 by the U.S.

A recent study by two prominent U.S. scientists raises a series of questions about Operation Ranch Hand, the widespread aerial spraying of such chemicals begun in 1961. The purpose was and is to expose trails used by the Viet Cong and their North Vietnamese allies and to destroy food in enemy areas.

Arthur W. Galston, a biology professor at Yale University and president-elect of the Botanical Society of America, says 1,500,000 acres may be affected this year and perhaps 450,000 acres of that, or five per cent of the 8,000,000 cultivated acreage, is crop land.

Galston writes that "we may set in motion an irreversible chain of events which could continue to affect both the agriculture and the wildlife of the area — and therefore the people — long after the war is over."

His colleague, Jean Mayer of Harvard, says past history shows any resultant food shortages "will strike first and hardest at children, the elderly and pregnant and lactating women, least and last at adult males and least of all at soldiers."

Their report was published in a special issue of Science and Citizen and an extract of Galston's conclusions in the New Republic. Galston says the hazards include imperfect understanding so far of just what action the chemical defoliant can cause, and lack of tests on how they act in a climate and environment such as Vietnam.

While they are said by U.S. officials to become non-dangerous in the soil, "they are transformed into new compounds which may, under some circumstances, have deleterious consequences."

He cites cases where the herbicides have damaged French-owned rubber trees as well as domestic farm produce ranging from water melons to rice.

Galston also notes that fish, often raised in rice paddies in Vietnam, may be indirectly affected if not damaged outright. The chemical poisons, he says, could kill the small water plants on which the fish feed.

The scale of the U.S. spraying is indicated by the U.S. Air Force budget allocating $39,500,000 for the year ended last June 30 for 5,000,000 gallons of herbicides. Later, the defence department said contracts worth $57,700,000 had been awarded.

Nationalism Rampant

Scots Threaten To Ape Rhodesia

UPI, from Glasgow

Scotland's National Party, riding the crest of resurgent north of the border nationalism, has announced that it wants to follow the example of Rhodesia and declare independence from Britain, wistfully within four years.

National Party chairman Arthur Donaldson said Scotland will take the decision as soon as Scots assert their freedom "from the grasp of London's greedy fingers" by electing a majority of Nationalists among the 71 Scottish members permitted to sit in Britain's House of Commons.

Donaldson hopefully predicted a Nationalist majority in Britain's next general election which must be held by 1971. Scottish Nationalist Mrs. Winifred Ewing took her House of Commons seat last month, the first, Donaldson predicted, of the new wave.

"We would hope to have separation from the rest of Britain by agreement just as we made the original treaty of 1707 by agreement," Donaldson told a press conference.

"It will be only in the event that the English majority should try to stop us that we would seek unilateral independence. There would be no need for a referendum of the Scots people. The next parliamentary election will be a referendum."

Donaldson said the time had come for Scots to face the possibility of a unilateral break with Britain, as had Rhodesia. In anticipation of the move, he said, his party had informed the foreign ministers of 27 European countries, including the Soviet Union, and had received acknowledgements from all of them.

The problems of relations between an independent Scotland and the United States, Donaldson said, would be solved later, but he served notice now that the U.S. Polar nuclear submarine base at Holy Loch would have to go.

An independent Scotland would not "countenance the setting of nuclear weapons on her territory," and would restrict armed forces to an armed militia against an invasion from England or anywhere else.

European countries were advised of National Party intentions now, Donaldson said, to prevent impressions getting around that Scotland might want to join the European Common Market just because Britain does.

An independent Scotland, Donaldson said, would demand a United Nations seat, diplomatic recognition overseas — and a second coronation of English kings and queens in Edinburgh.

Will Devaluation Work?

By MARVIN D. LIPTON

When he devalued the pound, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson made perhaps the hardest decision of his political career. For three years Britons tolerated a stagnant economy, lagging wages and mounting unemployment so that Wilson could avoid the policy he was finally forced to adopt.

Although the prime minister had no real alternative in the matter, he feels his decision will lead Britain to solvency. Others are not so certain of the consequences of devaluation for Britain and the Western world.

By deciding to devalue, London simply lowered the value of the pound in relation to other international currencies, making each pound worth $2.40 U.S. rather than its previous $2.80.

It is reasoned that British goods sold abroad will now become cheaper and more attractive while foreign goods sold in Britain will be more expensive.

Britons would then be encouraged to buy home-made items and shun products from elsewhere. Accordingly, exports are expected to increase, the demand for jobs to rise, unemployment to fall and a new era of prosperity to dawn.

In many segments of the world financial community optimistic views about devaluation do not abound.

For permanent benefits to accrue, devaluation must be accompanied by domestic reforms. Devaluation amounts to a general price reduction of a country's exports in terms of foreign currencies.

Unless there are restraints by both unions and consumers, the new competitive advantage gained on the world market is soon eroded because of inflation and rising prices in the devaluing nation.

CURRENT EVENTS

Frank Cousins, the leader of Britain's largest union, Transport and General Workers, implies that labor is in no mood to co-operate with Wilson's demands for restraint. "Patriotism goes out the window when money is involved. Why should we be patriotic if other people are going to cash in on it?"

Furthermore, Britain so far has been unable to develop the modern industrial technique necessary for her to compete effectively in world trade.

The second major worry raised by devaluation is that it threatens the entire system of "finance" world trade. For a while, at least, the American dollar faces a critical test.

During 1968, the United States paid other nations $1,300,000,000 more than it received from them. In 1967, this figure could climb by $1,000,000,000.

If European countries were to insist on their rights and demand U.S. gold in exchange for U.S. dollars, the massive drain on the U.S. treasury could force it to devalue the dollar — that is make it worth less gold.

Because American money is a global currency, in the event of such devaluation these countries holding U.S. dollars would suddenly and unfairly find their assets slashed.

The slightest indication that such a devaluation is probable, introduces a speculative element into the market. Fluctuations quite unrelated to the underlying conditions of international trade have a devastating effect.

In the short run, financiers holding currency rumored on the brink of devaluation, unload it in a rush and increase the downward pressure on that money.

In the long run, without stable exchange rates, foreign investors can never be sure of the value that will lay behind the money they eventually bring home.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

- For Wilson's devaluation to work, labor and management must be willing to work harder for smaller take-home pay and smaller profits. Is this likely?
- It is said that U.S. Canada wage parity will cause inflation and discourage an inflow of U.S. money to Canada. How might such parity wages then affect the value of our dollar?

No Comment On Protest

Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell said Monday he would have no comment on a protest from the Seventh Day Adventists about Saturday elections.

A. J. Mustard, minister of the church's Victoria congregation, said the choice of Saturday makes it impossible for his church members to vote because it is their day of worship.

Is there something that will help Oak Bay through a change of life?

The 12 candidates contesting the municipality's civic election Saturday all expect to have to deal with pressures to change their community's unique character.

Should more apartment building be permitted? Does Oak Bay have enough parks, particularly along its waterfront? How far should it go cultivating its own business district? And how many of those changes can the taxpayers afford?

Those are some of the issues that are making the Oak Bay contest one of the most interesting in the Greater Victoria area.

The municipality's ratepayers on Saturday will select a new reeve, who will succeed Alan Cox when he resigns at the end of this year.

In addition, there are four candidates for three, two-year terms and six candidates for two, one-year terms.

Here are distillations of their stands on planning and recreation questions:

Reeve

F. W. Hawes — It's too early to make final decisions on the long-range plan proposed last fall but more parks are needed and the "greenways" idea is good. There will be pressure for more apartments, which are good as long as their standards are high and their locations are carefully controlled.

John D. Watts — He endorses the idea of recreational greenways but many parks purchases proposed in the long-range plan are too expensive. Present economic climate for such acquisitions is unfavourable. Apartments are desirable if they do not destroy existing, good quality, residential districts. They could replace "distinctly older areas."

Council

James Audain — The municipality's predominantly elderly population needs park-like walkways, well-spaced benches and opportunities for restful pauses. Garden apartments may be the answer to the apartment dilemma. They should be removed from commercial and social centres but close to schools and transportation.

Donald Cameron — "No more high rise apartment zoning in Oak Bay," he says. "Any expansion of apartment zoning should be confined to the vicinity of commercial areas. He does not think council should promote the proposed recreation centre."

Incumbent Walter Dodsworth — More parks will be needed as the population grows. A reason for Oak Bay's popularity is its natural attractions, so they must be preserved. A council committee studying the long-range plan will have to give it more study before the apartment question can be solved.

Leonard Duncan — The plan's proposal for apartment control is valid. Library services should be increased and he will support "any sound plan" to stop beach pollution.

Incumbent Frances Elford — Use the Oak Bay plan only as a guide but make sure every citizen has been given an opportunity to present his views, she suggests. A candidate's experience should be one of the criteria for election because of the increasing complexity and seriousness of regional problems.

Alexander Hendry — Don't buy any new parks until the existing ones are properly developed. The idea of greenways is novel but "not altogether practical" and he suggests the present apartment zones be developed before any new areas are set aside. In addition, "blanket rezoning cannot be defended."

Ian Horne — Oak Bay should establish a new system of priorities for its spending. He was disappointed with council's stand on the 1965 hospital referendum and thinks that in such cases it should make sure it presents both sides of the picture. The tax implications of current recreation and park proposals should be analyzed in greater depth.

Jack Rhodes — The Oak Bay plan should be used only as a reference work — an advisory document. He is not prepared to increase the municipality's debt to carry out its recommendations. If any parks have to be developed, the improvements should start with Uplands Park. Parks should be spotted around the community.

Election Day

Change Added No Votes

The change of voting day in civic elections from Thursday to Saturday has failed to bring out more voters, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday.

It was done at the request of the municipalities, on the theory that it would stimulate more voter interest, the minister said.

The move didn't work as everyone involved had hoped it would, Mr. Campbell said. Politics at the local government level still remained largely "a spectator sport" with usually only about 25 per cent of the electorate making major decisions on elected representatives and plebiscites.

NOT MUCH HOPE — Mr. Campbell said he hoped predictions of another low turnout in municipal elections to be held across the province Saturday would prove incorrect. But he indicated there wasn't much chance this hope would be borne out.

The problem obviously didn't lie in dates or technical procedures, the minister said, but in something much deeper. What that something was, he added, could not be accurately defined.

Johnson Denies Rumors Of Cabinet Upheavals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson denied Monday that other cabinet members were planning to follow Defense Secretary McNamara in resigning. Rumors to the contrary, he said, were being spread "by some kids who have been ... setting up straw men."

Johnson, speaking to reporters in the cabinet room, rejected reports that the resignation of McNamara, who will become president of the World Bank, would be followed by others.

Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz was reported last week to be ready to quit, but both he and the labor department denied this.

Asked whether these unidentified "kids" were old enough to be members of Congress, Johnson said, "I did not have any member of Congress in mind."

Chapman

but added, "although I'm sure some of them were involved."

Furthermore, the president said, he thought he was considerably better informed about what was going inside his own cabinet than did certain persons on the outside who had been forecasting more resignations.

Johnson held an impromptu news conference after calling in reporters to personally announce his selection of Gen. Leonard Chapman as the new commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps. Chapman, 54, will succeed Gen. Wallace Greene who retires Dec. 31.

The president also said his new defence budget would call for whatever was necessary to protect the nation, but that he had not yet reached the stage where a specific dollar figure could be determined.

IWA Strike

Pickets Ignored By Carpenters

CRESTON (CP) — Members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners refused Monday to honor a picket line set up by striking Southern Interior members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Carpenters' union members crossed an IWA picket at a Crestbrook Forest Industries lumber mill and plywood operation here Monday morning.

NO TROUBLE

RCMP officers stood by, but there was no trouble between members of the two unions.

IWA men travelled more than 60 miles to set up the picket lines. The union has been on strike since Oct. 4 in the Southern Interior, seeking wage parity with coastal workers.

The union wants a 50-cent hourly pay raise for its southern members on a base rate of $2.26. IWA men in the Northern Interior settled for a 44-cent hourly wage increase in a contract signed two weeks ago with northern operators.

NEW CONTRACT

The carpenters signed a new contract during the weekend with Crestbrook, but terms have not yet been disclosed. The two unions have been involved in several jurisdictional battles across the province in recent months, though carpenters in other Southern Interior centres

NELSON (CP) — Embarrassed police admitted Monday the city's first accident during National Safe Driving Week occurred Friday when "an empty police car hit a telephone pole."

A spokesman said the accident took place when a city officer was dragged out of his vehicle while holding onto the coat of a youthful suspect he had in custody.

 The car's brakes were jostled during the tussle and the police cruiser rolled un-

No one was injured and the policeman managed to retain control of his prisoner.

Ottawa-B.C. Partnership

Housing Pact Soon?

B.C. hopes to win approval shortly for a new kind of federal-provincial partnership which could have far-ranging effects on all kinds of housing in the province, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday.

He refused to disclose details of the proposal, which will be placed before the federal-provincial housing conference opening in Ottawa next Monday, but said the program would be province-wide and apply to "any income group."

The minister said he was optimistic about the adoption of the new program, which he described as "a new departure in co-operative federalism."

The province hopes to enter a new partnership with Ottawa which will provide "a rational, sensible, objective approach" to solving the housing crisis, Mr. Campbell said.

The first step, already in progress, the minister said, will be to take a complete inventory of housing needs in B.C. So far, he added, neither the public nor private sector had bothered to learn precisely what was needed in the way of housing accommodation.

BY PROVINCES

Mr. Campbell was asked to comment on a statement by E. H. Gerhart, Alberta municipal affairs minister, that more housing should be administered by the provinces.

"The point they raise on more initiative for provincial housing, I think, is a valid one," he said. "But I don't believe we should lose the federal-provincial partnership. I think we in B.C. have the answer to a more workable partnership."

Good Weather, Expo Help Parks Record

More than 6,000,000 visits were recorded this year in B.C. provincial parks—an increase of more than 18 per cent over 1966, Recreation Minister Kiernan announced Monday.

Good weather plus the influence of Expo 67 on travel through the province were credited with increased park use spread quite evenly through the province. Day visits increased 21 per cent, but due to extreme forest fire hazard in late summer, camping in parks increased only 15 per cent.

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months. This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Governments Should Stop 'Silent Robber'

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Bank presidents in the not so long ago made conservative, carefully guarded, non-explosive statements when they addressed their shareholders annually. Their purpose was to please and placate.

The new banking executives are a different breed of cats. They are the wild-eyed, splitting, clawing offspring of well-contented tabbies. They him, scratch and care not of less majesty.

This is probably no bad thing. Bank presidents carry a fair amount of respect, and presumably even Finance Minister Sharp listens to them with reasonable attention.

Just as Neil McKinnon of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce minced no words about government overspending, which he described recently as a "massive swindle," so Arnold Hart, president of the Bank of Montreal, has called on governments at all levels to stop reckless spending and stop fanning the flames of inflation, which he called "the silent robber."

He told shareholders Canada's most pressing economic need is to slow down the growth rate of government spending, which has risen to 16 per cent from an annual 6 per cent in the early 1960s.

Governments are trying to do too much too fast, he said, and mediocre, which most of the provinces do not want immediately, is an example of this eagerness to overspend.

EXPORT THREAT

The cost of inflation was knocking Canada out of its vital importance as an export market.

The move to attain wage parity with the U.S. in many industries was also criticized by the bank president. He said the move was out of the question when Canadian productivity ran 20 per cent behind that of the U.S.

Wage parity could only be admissible when the productivity gap between the two countries had been narrowed or closed, he added.

PEACE RIGHTS PLANNED

Peace River Mining and Smelting, the Edmonton firm which has patented a process of turning iron powder into steel castings, has acquired two Ontario metal processing companies as the vehicle through which to get into operation.

They are Great Lakes Foundry Ltd. and G. L. Processing Ltd., which supply parts for the Canadian automobile industry. Peace River will provide the financing for Great Lakes Foundry to build the new iron powder plant to its specifications.

The estimated cost is $16,000,000 and Peace River plans to raise a minimum of $3,500,000 by offering rights to existing shareholders to purchase additional shares. In addition the company has arranged a first mortgage loan of $6,000,000 subject to junior financing.

SLOWDOWN HURTS

A slowdown by railway engineers which started transportation, new selling of sterling in Germany, and weekend comments that the pound would run into new trouble, created new problems for the British currency Monday.

The Canadian dollar, the day's strongest currency, was up 1 1/2 cents in terms of the pound. The pound was also down 1/2 cent at New York, where the Canadian dollar rose by 3-16th.

AGREEMENT REACHED

White Pass and Yukon Corp., the one-time gold rush railway, has signed an agreement with Anvil Mining Corp. to organize the transportation of concentrates from that company's operations at Vancouver to tide-water at Skagway.

The ore will be moved 230 miles to Whitehorse by truck and 110 miles from Whitehorse to Skagway by rail.

When Anvil is in full operation it will produce about 1,100 tons of concentrates a day. White Pass will use a fleet of between 30 and 40 heavy duty trucks for the road part of the haul. It will also build a $4,000,000 bulk loading terminal at Skagway.

TO TURN PUBLIC

Atco Industries Ltd. of Calgary, which make prefabricated buildings for a great variety of purposes throughout the world, is proposing to become a public company.

Ron Southern, president and son of the founder, says 2,500,000 shares will be created, and 500,000 will be sold to the public at a price in the $6-$7 range. The remaining shares will be retained by the Southern family.

Atco operates and had plants in Canada, the U.S., Britain, Australia, the Bahamas and Thailand. It also has a subsidiary in the U.S. air space industry.

Westbank Ruling Reserved

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyers for Canadian Finance and Investments Ltd. argued Monday that Parliament had created the Bank of Western Canada and only Parliament could dissolve it.

Walrus Williamson of Toronto, appearing for CFI and Toronto financier Sinclair Stevens, also said shareholders went beyond their powers in September when they approved a resolution to wind up the bank's affairs before it even opened its doors.

Mr. Justice Ronald Marland reserved his decision on a motion by CFI and Stevens to block the bank from proceeding to wind up its affairs.

Lawyers C. A. Geoffrion of Montreal and Allan Search of Winnipeg argued that the motion be denied.

We call it 1840 Reserve

You'll call it magnificent

It takes an uncommonly good whisky to make a man switch his brand. 1840 Reserve is an uncommonly good whisky. New in name only, 1840 Reserve is a happy blend of two perfectly aged whiskies - a five year old and a twelve year old. The result is an exceptionally light taste. Light but richly rewarding. Try 1840 Reserve. Sip it slowly. Roll it on your tongue. The odds are you'll agree: new 1840 Reserve is magnificent.

Canada, represented by the eastern section of its national team, lost 6-2 to the Czech No. 1 team Monday. The first Soviet squad downed Poland 6-1 and the second team subdued the Czech No. 2 squad 3-1.

In the last round, Wednesday, the No. 1 Czech and Soviet teams clash. Canada takes on the Czech No. 2 team and Poland faces the Soviet No. 2 team. The tournament is being staged in honor of the 50th anniversary of the revolution that brought the Communists to power in the Soviet Union.

Canada, losing its third in four games, found Czech goalkeeper Irdji Kholichuk too much for them. He made 39 stops, many from point-blank range. Steve Rowe of Ottawa made 32 saves in the Canadian net.

The Canadians, behind 3-0 after two periods, got a goal from Cam Allison of University of Ottawa who scored at 2:46 of the final period, with 16 seconds left to play. Marshall Johnston of Birch Hills, Sask., scored the final goal.

Johnny Unitas and the Baltimore Colts did it again Sunday. Led by their master craftsman, the Colts remained professional football's only unbeaten club with a come-from-behind 23-17 victory over Dallas Cowboys before more than 60,000 ecstatic Baltimore fans.

Victory kept the Colts atop the Coastal Division of the National Football League's Western Conference and could enable them to clinch it by next Sunday.

The Baltimore club is a game ahead of Los Angeles Rams, 20-3 winners over Atlanta Falcons Sunday, with a break in the remaining two games of the schedule.

RAMS COULD TIE

Rams must get by Green Bay Packers next Sunday to keep their hopes alive while the Colts face New Orleans Saints, who have won but two of 12 games.

However, should both contenders win, the Rams could force a playoff the following Sunday, when they host the Colts in the final scheduled game.

Unitas had his troubles with the tough Cowboys. Colts got away to a 10-0 lead on a field goal by Lou Michaels and a touchdown pass from Unitas to Ray Berry, who made a leaping end zone catch on his first play since coming off the injured list.

COWBOYS HAD LEAD

But a poor punt, a fumble recovery and an interception returned 26 yards for a touchdown by 265-pound linebacker Dave Edwards had the Cowboys in front by 17-10 after three quarters.

Michals kicked two more field goals, one a 53-yarder which appeared to give the Colts the lift they needed, to get close. Then Unitas did it again by calmly producing the winning touchdown in the late minutes.

Getting the ball at mid-field after a punt, Unitas passed for 12 yards to John Mackey and to 19 yards to Willie Richardson on a march which ended with Lenny Moore slicing through a big hole for the last two yards with only 90 seconds left.

WIN IN LOSING

Despite the defeat, the Cowboys were able to clinch honors in the Capitol Division of the Eastern Conference when Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins wrecked each other's chances by playing to a 35-35 tie.

Likely opponents for the Cowboys in one playoff semifinal are Cleveland Browns, who clipped New York Giants, 24-14. Result left the Browns needing one victory, or one defeat for the Giants and St. Louis Cardinals to clinch.

Packers, their playoff spot clinched a week ago, again had trouble with Minnesota Vikings before a fumble by Joe Kapp gave them a chance for a field goal by Don Chandler just eight seconds from time which brought a 30-27 victory.

Chicago Bears, the most improved club in the league, got an outstanding performance from Gale Sayers in handing San Francisco 49ers a sixth straight loss.

Sayers ran 97 yards with the opening kickoff for one touchdown, galloped 13 yards around left end on a broken play for another six points, then climaxed his performance by taking a punt 58 yards for a third major score.

HOUSTON (UPI)—Don Floyd, defensive end for the Houston Oilers, was grumbling about the stunning blonde that ran up to the bench and kissed him during a game with the Miami Dolphins Sunday.

Floyd didn't see the romantic aspects of the situation, all he saw was the finger pointing accusingly at him for the disruption.

"I'm having a bad season," he noted after the game. The coach is a little down on me because I'm not playing well. They'll think I had something to do with it, I didn't," Floyd bellyached.

The buxom trophy hunter stalked the football field while 29,000 fans and 7,400 Boy Scouts watched.

ATTENTION-GETTER

She was identified by Oilers officials as Bubbles Cash, who has drawn attention at several of the Dallas Cowboys' games.

She left her seat after an Oilers pass play had been called back and intercepted the referee on the 20-yard line.

It wasn't hard to distinguish her from the players.

Conservative estimates put the Dallas night club entertainer's measurements at 42-24-38, all crowded into a tight and low black sweater and a mini-skirt.

The press box missed two plays watching her.

Bubbles gave up getting the football at the 42-yard line and ran over to the Oilers bench and kissed Floyd twice.

Oilers won the game, 17-14, and moved into a tie with New York Jets for the American Football League's Eastern Division lead.

BRONCOS HELP

Helping make that possible was Denver Broncos. The Western Division trailers came up with a fantastic second quarter in which they packed three touchdowns and two field goals into 10 minutes to upset New York Jets, 33-24.

Included in the scoring binge was a spectacular 72-yard punt return for a touchdown by rookie-back Floyd Little, who later suffered a broken collar bone which will sideline him for the season.

FOUR TD PASSES

Meanwhile, Oakland Raiders all but clinched the Western Division championship by routing San Diego's second-place Chargers, 41-21, behind the passing of Daryle Lamonic.

The former Notre Dame star, obtained for this season in a trade with Buffalo Bills, threw four touchdowns passes as his club moved a game and a half in front of the Chargers with three games left for both clubs.

Oakland's victory mathematically eliminated Kansas City Chiefs. The dethroned champions defeated the Bills, 23-12, but are three and a half games back with only two games left.

It wasn't disappointment or sadness which kept the ex-presidents of Victoria Chinooks officials Harold and Moe Turner subdued Sunday on the return ferry trip from Vancouver. It was a tired relief.

With Barry Turner leading the way, Chinooks retained a share of first place in the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League with a heart-stopping, 78-76, overtime victory over CVO Saints.

The win dropped CVO into third place while IGA Grocers, who have played two more games than Chinooks, retained a share of the league lead with a 61-51 victory over University of Victoria Jayvees at Gordon Head.

Barry Turner, who finished with 14 points, scored the first six points of the overtime period to spark the victory. He had missed several games with a leg injury.

The teams were deadlocked, 70-70, at the end of regulation time.

Chinooks were in control most of the way but Saints tied the game, 62-62, with six minutes left and led, 68-62, three minutes later but Victoria refused to panic and scored the next eight points.

Ken Elmer, who finished with 28 points, forced the overtime period when he scored just as the horn went.

Grocers built up a 21-point

University of Victoria Vikings forged to the front of the Victoria Rugby Union's first division on Sunday as they dumped Cowichan 12-3.

Vikings broke a first place tie with Castaways as two penalty goals by Rick Pyke and tries by Bob McFarlane and Tom Fugh carried them to their win over last-place Cowichan.

O'Keefes who were forced to settle for a 1-1 draw with Westminister Labatts in a Pacific Coast Soccer League game at Callister Park.

Possibly foreshadowing the kind of day that O'Keefes were going to have were two incidents that occurred on the bus trip to the ferry in the morning.

NEAR MISSES
Russ Ball was almost passed by as he waited in his car just before Beaver Lake and then O'Keefes played their finest soccer of the season in the first half, with young Brian Robinson filling in well at right fullback until Stothard took over after 35 minutes, but could only manage a 1-0 lead on Bert Soutar's goal early in the half.

Soutar had earlier missed a headed attempt on a fine cross from Dick Joyce in the first minute of play and Ike MacKay, who had set up Soutar's goal, shot inches wide on a break-away.

GOALIE BEATEN
MacKay beat Labatt goalkeeper Robin Davies, as the smooth-passing Victoria club dominated play, minutes later only to have centre-half George Mullar, a newcomer from Toronto of the National Professional League, save the ball on the goal line.

Davies kept his team in the game just before halftime with a great recovery that enabled him to put Marty Taylor's kicked drive over the bar.

Victoria deteriorated to aimless kicking tactics in the second half as New Westminster took over, but O'Keefes had appeared capable of holding on, especially when Sadler robbed the unmarked Jim Nicol with 15 minutes left to play.

Victoria deteriorated to aimless kicking tactics in the second half as New Westminster took over, but O'Keefes had appeared capable of holding on, especially when Sadler robbed the unmarked Jim Nicol with 15 minutes left to play.

Davies kept his team in the game just before halftime with a great recovery that enabled him to put Marty Taylor's kicked drive over the bar.

'Virginia' Significant Theatre

Gamble Scores

By BILL THOMAS

Sometimes theatre groups take a wild, wild gamble and tackle a demanding and controversial play. Nine times out of ten the whole affair is a disaster, but the Victoria Theatre Guild has pulled off a winner with Edward Albee's shocker, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

For my part I question full-house audience's reaction but since all theatre is purely subjective they have a right to their belly laughs.

For my part this is a totally unfunny play. It is caustic, bitter, and a sadistic slicing away of the human soul.

ODDS OVERCOME
Director Richard Litt has triumphed over monumental odds.

His leading man, John Dreen, was forced to withdraw during rehearsal and still the play went on.

Acting honors must go straight to Helen Smith, who plays the oversexed, overproof Martha. Philip Heron plays her souse husband, George, beautifully, and yet their repartee draws laughs from the audience. I fail to see comedy in a play whose director has retained a psychiatric medical adviser. This is about on a par with laughing at the ineptitude of retarded children.

TRIBUTE TO DIRECTOR
It was most pleasurable to see Harry Elsdon in a dramatic role. He does his job as Nick with competence and an assurance that I never knew he possessed. I feel his achievement is a tribute to director Richard Litt.

Mr. Elsdon is certainly worthy now of consideration by any director.

The versatility of Janet Senior is already a matter of record. She has the role of Honey in this production. Miss Senior as a new bride on a boat manages to get the maximum out of this secondary role.

Body Found

CAMPBELL RIVER—A body of a man was found in Discovery Passage north of here early Monday. RCMP are investigating.

For my money, the two most significant bits of theatre this season have come from Langham Court—First the Miracle Workers, and now Virginia Woolf.

Edward Albee remarked that he got the idea for the title of this play from a remark scribbled on the wall of a men's washroom in New York. There are some who will be inclined to dismiss the play as one long latrineograph, but serious theatre students will not want to miss this production.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? will run to Saturday, but I have a feeling it might have to be held over. It certainly is a "don't miss" in my book.

Around Town

Exercise Fireball Split Issue

About 50 civil defence workers and volunteers took part in Exercise Fireball Monday night. The exercise was based on the theory that an aircraft had come apart, with half falling on the city and half in Saanich. The Saanich disaster was dealt with by the civil defence as all Saanich emergency equipment was committed to Victoria. The crash in Saanich was simulated by a large bonfire at Kibber near Palo Alto.

The Greater Victoria school board said Monday tenders will be opened Dec. 20 for an addition to Shelbourne elementary school in Gordon Head. Estimated cost for the five classrooms, kindergarten, library, special classroom and toilets is $128,500.

Mrs. Anne Muir, 619 Duppen, was in satisfactory condition in St. Joseph's Hospital Monday after being hit by a car at 8:40 a.m. while crossing Douglas and Tolmie.

Christine Bramley, 3577 Duke, was in fairly good condition in the same hospital with injuries received at Rose and Esplanade Sunday when a car that did not stop forced her car into a parked car.

A 16-year-old boy whose name was withheld because he is a juvenile escaped with out knees and bruises Monday evening when his motorcycle collided with a car at Vancouver and McClure. The impact sent the cyclist over the hood and through the car windshield.

Weatherman Joins Forefathers

An Indian centenarian whose ability to predict weather has never been explained now sleeps with his forefathers in the Songhees cemetery.

Jimmie Fraser died in a Chilliweck Hospital, of old age. He came from a proud line which included "King Freese," his grandfather, who acted as a guide and mentor to Sir James Douglas.

He took great pride in his ancestors, known as peacemakers when the country was still in the hands of the Indians. He insisted he based his weather predictions on signs of nature, and chats with the spirits of the birds, animals and fish.

He regarded the winds, rocks and trees as spirit powers.

Survive Transplants

Five Girls Make Medical History

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Five little girls continued Monday to make progress—and medical history, as the world's only known human survivors of liver transplant operations.

All five remained in fair condition, with the latest addition to the group—Candy Barbaree, 18-year-old daughter of Mrs. Albert Barbaree, Orlando, Fla.—still in the intensive care unit at the University of Colorado Medical Centre. She underwent her operation Nov. 25.

The survival record still is held by Julie Rodriguez, 25-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rodriguez, Pueblo, Colo., who had her transplant nearly 4½ months ago.

Paula Kay Hansen, 25-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Hansen, Fort Worth, Tex., who received her new liver Aug. 1, continues to be bothered by declining liver function, but doctors report some slight improvement in her case.

The others are Carol Lynn MacCourt, 16-month-old daughter of Martin MacCourt, Salt Lake City, who has had a new liver since Oct. 8, and Kerri Lynn Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale L. Brown, Long Beach, Calif. Kerri's operation was Sept. 5.

Researcher said they were encouraged, but they pointed out how early the results were, that the results were similar to those attained with standard treatment, and that only small doses of the drug have been given.

On the other hand, they said seven out of seven patients with acute lymphoblastic leukemia showed a prompt response when treated with the enzyme, L-asparaginase. This common form of leukemia is, however, almost most responsive to standard treatments.

MOST IMPORTANT
Most important perhaps is that the enzyme is a natural antagonist to a protein building-block or amino acid produced by normal cells. Some cancer cells cannot produce the amino acid, and must absorb what they need from body fluids.

Researcher said they were encouraged, but they pointed out how early the results were, that the results were similar to those attained with standard treatment, and that only small doses of the drug have been given.

On the other hand, they said seven out of seven patients with acute lymphoblastic leukemia showed a prompt response when treated with the enzyme, L-asparaginase. This common form of leukemia is, however, almost most responsive to standard treatments.

Courtroom ParadeDriver's Fines Total $750

A 37-year-old motorist who has driven for 10 years without a licence was fined $200 when he pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court Monday to driving without a licence.

Gerald Hawes, 1854 Old Island Highway, was also fined $300 for impaired driving and $250 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. He pleaded guilty and was barred from driving for one year.

'AUDACITY'

After Hawes told the court he had been driving for 10 years without a licence, Magistrate William Ostler said: "You have more audacity than anybody I have ever heard of."

Prosecutor Cory Stolte said Hawes' car ran into the rear of a car slowing for a police roadblock Saturday night on the Island Highway.

Hawes then turned around but was caught by RCMP officers. He said he didn't want to be caught for impaired driving.

Frederick Walter Smith, 42, of 2575 Wentwich was sentenced to 21 days in jail for impaired driving, fined $250 for dangerous driving and $250 for driving while his right to obtain a licence was suspended. He pleaded guilty and his licence was suspended for two years.

Smith was followed by RCMP officers at about 11 p.m. Nov. 27 after he was seen to be driving erratically.

WRONG SIDE

When police flashed a red light and sounded the car's siren, Smith accelerated, court was told. The police car tried to pull alongside, but Smith pulled to the left, side of the highway and drove for three-tenths of a mile on the wrong side.

His speed was 75 miles an hour, Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said. Smith stopped after three miles of chase and ran from his car.

He admitted previous convictions for impaired driving, dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

A motorist who ran a red light at Oak Bay Avenue and Richmond Saturday and struck another car was found hiding behind some garbage cans in the darkest corner of a nearby lot.

Stanley Richie, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident and was fined $250. He was fined $75 for careless driving and his licence was suspended.

Mr. Stolte said Richie stopped his car after the smash, reversed and then drove away. He was found hiding soon afterward.

John Walker of Campbell River was fined $50 on each of two counts of supplying liquor to a minor. He bought a mickey of rum for each of two teenagers Saturday.

Fire Officer:Some Plugs Can Be Dangerous

A city fire department officer warned Monday certain types of electrical plugs can be dangerous unless the wires are inserted with care.

Deputy Chief R. J. Coates said the plug was the type in which the wires are bared before being inserted in the plug.

He said a plug of this description was partly responsible for a mattress fire Thursday at the home of Mrs. William Alter, 36 Menzies.

BACK TOO FAR

Chief Coates said the wires were bared back too far in this case and touched a caster on the bed, causing a short circuit.

Also, the circuit-breaker did not work, and the fire began. It was out when firemen arrived.

Chief Coates said people using such plugs should be careful that the wire is not exposed too much and that the bared wires are secure.

Ferry Staff Reduced

About 30 B.C. ferry employees have been laid off recently as the result of the prolonged tie-up of the Queen of Prince Rupert.

A spokesman for the ferry employees' union said they were low seniority personnel, many of them still on their probationary terms of employment. Senior employees of the idle ferry have been shifted to other jobs for the layoff period.

Magistrate Ostler told Walker that what he did was "simply cut-rate bootlegging."

Alan Walsh of Vancouver was fined $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and $35 for careless driving. John Knezacky, 905 McClure, was fined $50 for driving while his licence was suspended.

Leonard Wahlund, HMCS Columbia, was fined $25 for causing a disturbance by being drunk. He shouted and became violent Saturday night on the parking lot of the Victoria Garden Court Motel, 110 Menzies.

Patrick Cramer, 536 Johnson, was fined $25 for causing a disturbance Sunday at Harbor Lights by being drunk.

Fined for careless driving: Royce Johnson, 4200 Ghanford, $40; Marjorie McLachlan, 2911 Quenston, $35; Gary Simpson, 1521 Westall, $40; Alfred Sephton, 308 Robert, $35.

Fined for letting their dogs be at large: Phyllis Auclair, 827 Toronto, $5; Millicent Buckley, 576 Rockheights, $5; John Wilkinson, 1392 David, $7.50.

Sale to India

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States announced plans to sell India 3,500,000 tons of wheat in the first half of 1968.

Thieves Strike Two Businesses

Two business premises in the 700 block Fort were broken into during the weekend and about $55 stolen. In both cases, rear windows were broken to gain entry.

City detectives said about $45 in coins was taken from the Crystal Restaurant, 769 Fort, and about $10 from Lillian West Bakery, 773 Fort.

Referendum, Trustees Saanich Ballot Issues

Voters of the Saanich school district Saturday will decide the fate of a $554,800 school building referendum and pick two trustees from seven candidates.

The referendum is for an amount which the school board says is needed to complete a $1,855,400 construction program approved in 1965. The original referendum is insufficient to do the job, board spokesmen have announced.

The district extends from Royal Oak north to the tip of the Saanich peninsula and is composed of four municipal areas.

Only ratepayers will vote on the referendum. All residents on the voters' list are eligible to vote for trustees.

Saanich residents will pick one of five candidates for the seat left vacant by Mrs. E. P. Thomas, who is not running again.

John Armstrong, 49, of 813 Claremont, is a securities salesman who was born in Victoria. His father, the late J. A. Armstrong, was a teacher here for 31 years.

Mr. Armstrong wants quality schools without frills, and thinks that standardizing plans would help. He is against radical teaching methods.

John Blenko is a chartered accountant who lives at 4865 Cherry Tree Bend. He has worked in many parts of the world.

"I could help the board because of my considerable financial and administrative experience," he says.

Mr. Blenko has said he will work for the best education for the district's children. "Our most valuable natural resource."

Nels Granewall is a 1961 graduate of the University of Victoria, where he is now the campus financial aid officer. Mr. Granewall, 27, of 5630 Alderley Road, is also the owner of Berryland produce centre.

He favors a change in education finance. The present system of taxing property owners only has pushed them to the breaking point, he feels.

Mr. Granewall advocates that the financing of secondary education be assumed by the province through an increase in the sales tax. Otherwise, Saanich's greenbelt faces destruction through taxation, he feels.

A. H. (Pat) Murphy, of 5225 Patricia Bay Highway, has been a columnist for nine years. For the past three years he has covered municipal affairs from Victoria City Hall.

"If Saanich continues its present rate of growth, then School District 63 will become one of the largest in B.C.," he says. "My experience as a newspaperman in touch with municipal and provincial government will be of value in keeping the public informed during this period of growth."

Stanley Oakes, 814 Royal Oak, is a professional engineer. He is married, with four children ranging from elementary school to university.

He says he will work for continued progress in school development to meet the needs of the growing community, and for improvement in methods and quality of education.

Central Saanich is seeing a two-way contest for the seat held by incumbent Vernon Beaumont.

Mr. Beaumont, a retired electrical engineer, lives at 7129 East Saanich Road and has held his seat for two years. He is head of the board's bus transportation and building committees.

His opponent is Lennie Kiar Yee, 2660 Island View, a chemist employed by the Defence Research Board.

Mr. Yee advocates greater centralization of schools, more use of mechanical teaching aids, increased community use of the schools, and more male teachers in the primary grades.

Mr. Yee supports the argument that education funds should come from the province's general revenue rather than property taxes.

There will be no election for school trustee in North Saanich this year. Maj. Charles MacNeil, 1492 Land's End Road, filled the post by acclamation.

Sidney also has no trustee election this year.

Appeal Division Labor-Board Bill Past First Step

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Monday gave first reading to a government proposal to clarify powers of the Canada Labor Relations Board and give it authority to hear certain appeals.

The bill would give the 19-year-old board a new appeal division. The division would hear appeals only on board rulings concerning the appropriateness of labor bargaining units.

Mr. Yee supports the argument that education funds should come from the province's general revenue rather than property taxes.

There will be no election for school trustee in North Saanich this year. Maj. Charles MacNeil, 1492 Land's End Road, filled the post by acclamation.

CNTU to represent units when it has a preponderance of members regionally.

Also in the Commons: Prime Minister Pearson said the government has made no decision to abolish the CBC international service and a statement on a budget cut will be made later this week.

External Affairs Minister Martin said he hoped a Canadian note Saturday had ended a note exchange with Russia over Nov. 17 demonstrations outside the Soviet embassy in Ottawa.

The new measure, an amendment to the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, apparently is designed in part to meet complaints of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The CLRB now is composed of a chairman, vice-chairman and eight members, evenly divided between management and labor representatives.

Three of the labor members represent the Canadian Labor Congress and one represents the CNTU. The latter has complained that in issues between the two labor bodies, it does not get fair treatment.

The CNTU also has challenged the board's policy of refusing to break up national bargaining units to allow the Investment Lag Seen in Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Capital investment by businesses may decline between 1968 and 1972, falling short of the economy's needs, says a survey prepared for the Economic Council of Canada.

A selected group of firms in manufacturing, mining and trade reported their spending on construction, machinery and equipment will drop progressively in the next five years to less than 78 per cent of their 1966 level.

Utilities, a strong sustaining force in investment plans next year, would follow the same trend, spending only three per cent more in 1972 than in 1966.

Other businessmen were uncertain about the recommendations of the Carter royal commission on taxation, now largely rejected by the federal government, and about Kennedy Round tariff changes.

The survey covered 104 companies responsible for more than 50 per cent of total business investment in 1967. They included utilities, automotive, chemical, mining, petroleum, pulp and paper, retailing and steel companies.

INDEX FIXED

An investment index based on 1966 levels equalling 100 was established to cover the plans of 14 companies able to forecast to 1972.

The index rises to 108.4 in 1968, but declines steadily from then on—102 in 1969, to 99.5 in 1970, to 94.6 in 1971 and finally to 91.2 in 1972.

The economic council's fourth annual review has called for a 5.5-per-cent annual growth in business capital spending to provide sufficient productive capacity for the economy in the 1966-70 period.

HOPEFUL

"Thus the results of this survey raise questions about the adequacy of current capital investment plans to provide for a sufficient growth in productive capacity over the next few years," writes Mr. Keys.

British Combat Disease With Meat Ban

LONDON (AP) — An epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease, ravaging farms in Britain since October, forced the British government Monday to ban imports of meat from all countries where the disease is prevalent.

Hit hardest by the temporary ban are Argentina and Uruguay. North American meat exporters are not affected. Argentina supplies 90 per cent of Britain's chilled beef supplies.

PRICE INCREASE
Meat dealers in London expressed fears the ban would drive meat prices up for housewives already paying up to six cents more a pound because of devaluation of the currency last month and a long dock strike. A current slowdown by labor union workers on the nation's railroads could make matters worse if it continues or expands into a strike.

British farmers have been pressing the agriculture ministry to ban imports of meat from countries where foot-and-mouth disease is prevalent, although experts have been unable to trace the present epidemic to imported stocks.

So far the agriculture ministry has ordered the slaughter of 254,942 infected cattle, sheep, pigs and goats. Farmers are reimbursed by the government.

IMPORT RULE
Announcement of the ban was made by Agriculture Minister Fred Peart. He told Parliament meat importers would "suspend for the time being new shipments from all countries in the world except those very few where foot and mouth is unknown, or which have a long history of freedom from it."

Peart listed these countries as unaffected by the ban: Australia, Canada, Finland, Iceland, Ireland, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa and the U.S.

Peart said the order would be reviewed in three months time — if it is still in operation then.

Go-Slow Engineers Tie Up Commuters

LONDON (AP) — A go-slow campaign of British locomotive engineers built up steadily through the day and hit home-ward-bound London commuters hard Monday night. Railway spokesmen said it will be worse this morning.

Transport Minister Barbara Castle said more than 100 commuter trains were cancelled during the Monday morning rush period but emergency arrangements to speed vital supplies had worked "very smoothly."

The nationalized railway system announced cancellation of 41 suburban trains even before the homeward rush began.

Capsule Of Century

Records and mementos of British Columbia's twin centennial celebrations will be planted in a time capsule here New Year's Eve.

A spokesman for the provincial centennial committee announced Monday the capsule would be placed in the stonework of Confederation Fountain, near the Legislative Buildings.

"We hope the documents will remain there until Canada's second century," he added.

The time capsule will be buried at 11:30 p.m., Dec. 31 and will contain the committee's records of the 1966 and 1967 festivities, special editions of newspapers and mementos collected across Canada this summer by the B.C. helicopter.

Ferry Service Cancellation

B.C. Outmanoeuvred—NDP

Government and opposition spokesmen differed sharply Monday on the long-term effects of the temporary elimination of winter service by the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The NDP caucus which met over the weekend at Campbell River said the provincial government had been outmanoeuvred by Governor Walter Hickey, who announced a new Alaska state ferry run to Puget Sound.

Opposition leader Strachan, in a statement issued Monday, claimed "short-sighted" cuts in the Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert service could wreck the long-term hopes of the northern end of Vancouver Island.

Instead of cutting service, Mr. Strachan said, B.C. should immediately resume the northern ferry service — interrupted when the $6,500,000 Queen of Prince Rupert ran aground Aug. 11 — and build more ships to expand it.

Premier Bennett, asked if he would push forward the announced March 28 date of resumption of the service, said: "Mr. Strachan is entitled to his point of view. The public have dealt with him on a number of occasions."

Meanwhile, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, M.L.A. for Comox riding, which includes northern Vancouver Island, said he was convinced that "in the long run" the competing Alaska ferry service would help B.C.

"The more people who are drawn up to the northwest sector of the U.S., the better off every part of this province will be," Mr. Campbell said.

The minister admitted, however, that the Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert ferry service inaugurated in May, 1966, might have been "ahead of time in terms of immediate need." But he added: "In terms of bringing new capital investment to the area, it was right on time."

He said the actual returns from the service, so far undiscussed by the ferry authority, were not of prime importance. To these, he said, must be

Pollution Expert Well Qualified

Board Prejudice 'Shocking'

A Victoria health inspector said Monday night he was shocked at the "prejudice" shown by the provincial Pollution Control Board toward a California scientist.

Lloyd Smith said in a letter to Saanich council that it didn't occur to anyone except the board's director to question the credentials of Albert Marino.

Mr. Marino spoke at a meeting called two weeks ago by the Saanich Action Committee to discuss the regional sewer study. He was against dumping sewage into the sea.

"Mr. Marino came to Victoria to say things I couldn't say," said Mr. Smith.

His letter, along with an exchange between the Pollution Control Board and California authorities about Mr. Marino's credentials, was read at Monday night's meeting.

C. J. Keenan, director of the board, said in a letter to the California public health department:

"... A certain Dr. Albert Marino appeared as an expert in pollution control matters at a public meeting. Dr. Marino presented himself as chief of the division of environmental health of Placer County."

Mr. Keenan said that, as a result of his remarks, "there is now a considerable degree of controversy going on in our area involving certain well-founded proposals to discharge sewage."

He wanted Mr. Marino's "status and qualifications" so that the remarks could be put "in their true perspective."

"Quite often we have thrust upon us people who claim expertise. We are anxious to determine into what category we should place Dr. Marino's remarks."

Dr. Robert W. Day, deputy director of public health for the state of California, had nothing but praise for Mr. Marino in the reply.

He said Mr. Marino is a registered sanitarian with a science degree from the University of California. Other qualifications cited by Dr. Day:

Former director of sanitation for Madera County, former sanitarian with Long Beach city health department and currently chief of environmental health with the Placer County health department.

Dr. Day listed nine other appointments, including one to a governor's "task force" to develop water quality policy for Lake Tahoe.

He was appointed by the governor to the state board of health six months ago and "has served with the energy, interest and knowledge that one would assume from this broad background in environmental health problems."

"He has developed and presented on a number of occasions his reasoned views, widely-accepted in the state, on the need for a no-discharge policy in relation to mountain streams, lakes and reservoirs regardless of the degree of treatment of effluent."

"... There is certainly no question remaining. I am sure, in regard to Mr. Marino's qualifications. May I congratulate you and the citizens of the province in the choice of Mr. Marino as a speaker."

After hearing the letters, Saanich Coun. Edith Gunning commented: "It is very unfortunate that Mr. Marino was not acquainted with local conditions."

Coun. Leslie Passmore, who met him at the Saanich Action Committee meeting, said Mr. Marino told him he was not totally familiar with problems in sewage disposal here.

November was warmer, drier, sunnier and less windy than usual, the Victoria weather office said Monday.

Wives of striking shingle workers from McCarter Shingle and Shake Ltd. paraded with picket signs Monday at the home of Cecil Yates, 232 Superior.

The three women's demonstration was similar to that of three workmen Friday at the residence.

William Bell, president of Local 3802 of the Shingle Weavers' Union, said Mr. Yates was one of two men who had come up from the U.S. to operate the McCarter plant on Songhees Road on a reduced basis.

The plant's 17 shingle-weavers went out on strike Oct. 16 after about six weeks of negotiations toward the plant's first contract.

On the weekend, William McCarter, company president, said the company had offered workmen $33 or $34 a day under two alternative plans which depend on each man producing at least 30 lumber squares a day.

UNION DEMAND

"However, the union has demanded a guarantee of $33 a day, which if they do not cut 30 squares a day we simply cannot afford to pay," Mr. McCarter said.

The alternatives were for $1.10 a square, or $1 a square plus 50 cents an hour.

Conciliation officer Jack Sherwood has called a meeting of company and union representatives for today.

Fall of the Circus Tent—Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock the tent of the circus was blown down by a severe south-wester. A young man connected with the circus who had climbed the pole for the purpose of fastening a guy rope fell with the canvas to the ground, and was slightly injured in the back. The damage to the establishment will not exceed five dollars. In consequence of the high wind, the performance advertised for yesterday will not be held.

SAANICH COUNCIL WAS TOLD Monday night that subdivisions which have received approval to any degree are probably excluded from new regulations banning sand filters on septic tanks.

"This is good news," said Reeve Hugh Curtis, after hearing a report from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer. "I think we can all breathe a little easier."

Dr. Whitbread told Saanich council he would have all the now septic tank regulations clarified with provincial authorities within two weeks.

SAND FILTERS

Last week, he told the municipality's lands and planning committee that sand filters were forbidden. On Monday night, he explained that this ruling had been in effect in municipalities outside of Saanich for two years.

Dr. Whitbread explained that, as he understood the new regulations, they would not apply to subdivision plans which had been approved by municipal authorities in any way.

"Anything which has been set in motion and has received a nod... well, the new regulations would not apply," added L. E. Benham, senior environmental health inspector with the metropolitan health board.

INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Dr. Whitbread explained that problems of waste from industry had been placed under the jurisdiction of the Pollution Control Board, but waste disposal from homes and schools remained within his board's jurisdiction.

Council was also told that chemicals should not be used to kill weeds in Elk and Beaver Lakes.

The suggestion came from a committee studying restoration of Colquitz Creek and the Gorge. Most of the University of Victoria's biology professors are members.

GROWTH CUT

The committee suggested that instead of using herbicides to kill the weeds—Saanich last summer used 2,4-D—the growth that is a hazard to swimmers and boats should be cut.

The experts also felt a comprehensive plan should be prepared for Elk-Beaver Lake Park, along with a study of future land uses along the watershed.

INDUSTRIAL WASTE

Dr. Whitbread explained that problems of waste from industry had been placed under the jurisdiction of the Pollution Control Board, but waste disposal from homes and schools remained within his board's jurisdiction.

Council was also told that chemicals should not be used to kill weeds in Elk and Beaver Lakes.

The suggestion came from a committee studying restoration of Colquitz Creek and the Gorge. Most of the University of Victoria's biology professors are members.

GROWTH CUT

The committee suggested that instead of using herbicides to kill the weeds—Saanich last summer used 2,4-D—the growth that is a hazard to swimmers and boats should be cut.

The experts also felt a comprehensive plan should be prepared for Elk-Beaver Lake Park, along with a study of future land uses along the watershed.

SAANICH COUNCIL WAS TOLD Monday night that subdivisions which have received approval to any degree are probably excluded from new regulations banning sand filters on septic tanks.

"This is good news," said Reeve Hugh Curtis, after hearing a report from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer. "I think we can all breathe a little easier."

Dr. Whitbread told Saanich council he would have all the now septic tank regulations clarified with provincial authorities within two weeks.

SAND FILTERS

Last week, he told the municipality's lands and planning committee that sand filters were forbidden. On Monday night, he explained that this ruling had been in effect in municipalities outside of Saanich for two years.

Dr. Whitbread explained that, as he understood the new regulations, they would not apply to subdivision plans which had been approved by municipal authorities in any way.

"Anything which has been set in motion and has received a nod... well, the new regulations would not apply," added L. E. Benham, senior environmental health inspector with the metropolitan health board.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Last night I walked past the bathroom and there was my husband, sitting on the rim of the tub shaving his legs. I was pretty shocked at this sight and asked him what in the world he was doing. He replied, "I don't think the hair would look very good under my nylon hose."

Ann, I just couldn't believe my ears. I asked him when he planned to wear nylon hose. "Oh, tonight," he answered. "I'm in a little skit the lodge is giving. Tonight is a dress rehearsal. I'm Carmen." With that he reached for the artificial rose on the sink, put it between his teeth and began to do a Spanish dance, using his partial plate and a shoe horn as castanets.

He looked so utterly ridiculous that I walked into the bedroom and slammed the door. He left without saying goodbye so he is aware of my feelings. Now I need to know if I should insist that he drop out of the skit. I hate to see him make a jackass of himself. The skit will be given before lodge members and their families only, but there are about 200 of us. Please wire collect.—MRS. CARMEN

Dear Mrs.: If this is your husband's idea of fun, don't knock it, honey. I've heard from many wives who would be mighty pleased if their husbands changed hobbies with yours. Go to the meeting and laugh—if it kills you.

Dear Ann Landers: Please rearrange this letter and make it printable. I need your advice but I can't take a chance on having your answer come to the house. I am 17 years old and have already gone to bed with so many guys I cannot even remember all their names. I am not beautiful and my personality is on the quiet side, but I manage to attract boys and men of all ages. I never plan on going to bed with them, but it seems like I always wind up there.

Whenever a guy says a decent word to me I think I owe him whatever he asks for. I even find myself giving into creeps just so they'll stop pestering me. I also give in to the pitiful types who don't appeal to me just because I feel sorry for them. I figure nobody else would and they must feel very rejected. At times I feel I'm just too kind-hearted for my own good. Other times I have a feeling I'm not too normal.

Please give me some help.—EVERYBODY'S GIRL

Dear Girl: You are a plenty sick and you need more help than I can give you. Talk to your school counselor about therapy through a mental health clinic if you can't afford private psychiatric care. And get a physical check-up at once. Such promiscuity can lead to all kinds of physical problems.

Dear Ann Landers: We are having a big Bar Mitzvah supper for our son. I enclosed RSVP cards with each invitation. Several people have not answered. Would it be proper to telephone them or should I assume they aren't coming? Some of the people who have not responded have college educations. How come they don't know better?—M.L. PITTSBURGH

Dear M.L.: Manners are not taught in college. By all means telephone the guests who have not responded and ask if they plan to come. This is the best way to protect yourself against winding up with 12 extra pounds of chopped liver.

Bride Wears Mother's Veil

Linda Jean Temple wore her mother's veil when she became the bride of Bernard Glen Maggiora in Gordon United Church. The chapel-length veil was edged in embroidery and misted from a headpiece of orange blossoms.

The bride's gown was of Chantilly lace over silk organza. The fitted bodice was accented by cape sleeves and a jewelled neckline. The hoop skirt featured tiers of scalloped lace. A tiered train extended from the shoulderline. The bride carried a bouquet of rose-colored shaggy chrysanthemums and satin ribbons.

Rev. G. Smith officiated at the ceremony that united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Temple, 1153 Goldstream Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Maggiora, 1773 Feltham Road. The bride's father gave her in marriage.

The church was decorated with shaggy chrysanthemums in the same shade as those in the bride's bouquet. Ernest Yates played the organ and Miss Judy Temple, the bride's sister sang, "I'll Walk Beside You."

Miss Temple was also maid of honor for her sister. Mrs. J. Jennings and Mrs. R. Brown were bridesmaids. The three wore matching full-length gowns in rose peau de sole styled along empire lines and accented by silver and white ribbons. They carried bouquets of tiny pink and white chrysanthemums and wore silver dogwood pins that were gifts of the bride.

Rick Maggiora was best man for his brother, Parker O'Kano,

Jim Jennings and Richard Brown acted as ushers.

After the ceremony there was a reception in Wolf's Rathskeller restaurant. A cake, made and decorated by Miss Philpott centred the head table. The cake was decorated in rose and white and topped with wedding candles and tulle. The bride donned a teal wool suit for travelling. After a honeymoon spent at Disneyland, Los Angeles and San Francisco, the couple will return to Victoria to live.

Newlyweds Travel To Ottawa

Sub-Lt. Ronald McLean, RCN, and Mrs. McLean left on a honeymoon trip to Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and Niagara Falls following their wedding in the Chapel-by-the-Sea, HMC Dockyard.

The bride, the former Jill Elaine Humphries, wore a white crepe gown topped with a lace coat, that was styled with lily point sleeves and was gathered at the neckline to sweep back into a cathedral train. Satin roses held her tiered veil of illusion tulle, which was scalloped and edged in seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and ivy. As a "something old and borrowed" talisman she wore an amethyst ring belonging to Miss Christine Nelson.

Fr. D. Hatfield heard the vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ian Humphries, 1121 Munroe Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McLean of Downsview, Toronto, who travelled to Victoria for the service. Mr. Humphries gave his daughter in marriage.

Bronze and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the church. Mrs. Williams was the organist. Miss Kristie Humphries was maid of honor for her sister and the Misses Christine Nelson and Donna Humphries, a sister, were bridesmaids. They wore matching gowns of jade green deconstructed satin with tulle ribbons highlighting their Grecian hair styles. They each carried a single bronze chrysanthemum in a cascade of gold satin ribbon and ivy.

Sub-Lt. Peter Watt acted as best man and ushering guests were Sub-Lt. Yves Trotter and Sub-Lt. Tom Watson.

A reception followed in the officer's wardroom, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. Yellow roses topped the wedding cake, which was made by Mrs. J. S. Humphries, the bride's grandmother, and Mrs. J. W. Lord, the bride's aunt. The groom's sword was used to cut the cake. Lt.-Col. F. D. Nelson (Rtd.) proposed the toast to the bride. As her travelling costume the bride chose a blue and green wool dress, topped with a blue coat and matching accessories. Yellow roses in corsage completed her ensemble.

Complexion Beauty

The secret of beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of tropical moist oil. The skin takes on an immediate healthy bloom as the tiny lines and blemishes are gently smoothed away. This saturation treatment with the moist oil of Olay is recommended by skin care consultants, who advise its daily use as a powder base to give the complexion day-long beauty. This special showgirl costume was designed by Ice Capades' costume designer, Bill Campbell. Created at a cost of $3,500 each, there are four of these gowns in The King Lives On segment of this year's show starting Wednesday at the Memorial Arena.

Ice Capades

Lavish Show Costumes Cost Over $400,000

The average woman in Victoria may spend no more than $1,000 a year on clothing. Yet, just one girl in Ice Capades will wear more than $10,000 worth of costume in one 2½ hour performance.

Costumes in the show are lavish, and they are an indispensable element in the extravaganza. Materials are elaborate and expensive and craftsmanship is careful and intricate. In the 27th edition of Ice Capades opening at the Memorial Arena on Wednesday there are more than 500 fresh designs.

Prices for the creations range as high as $3,500 for one gown which features hundreds of hand-sewn, dyed feathers. And, hats, wigs, gloves and jewelry, all equally elaborate, often are as expensive as the costume.

Ice Capades is the only road show of its kind to have its own facilities for the production of sets, stage and costumes. Since an entirely new program is produced each year, fresh ideas are at a premium. Talented costume designers, Bill Campbell and Miles White seem to have an abundance of them.

The ballgowns which are part of the "King Lives On" production — a salute to the late King Cole — were designed by Bill Campbell whose credits range from Las Vegas productions to the current Dean Martin TV Show.

Mr. Campbell feels that gimmicks and incredibility pay off in an arena spectacle. "You tout incredibility and the audience loves it. Wigs, for instance, provide the deception of uniformity. Stuffed animals come to life when moveable devices make them walk or wag their tails. All of these can be grouped under the general heading of costume gimmicks — even such off-beat thing that we've done in Ice Capades — like embroidering chinchilla with crystal beads."

Work on Campbell's designs begins nine months before the show is scheduled to premiere. Great care in the selection of materials is taken, and in the

Heavy Satin Embossed with Roses Worn by Campbell River Bride

Standards of chrysanthemums in autumn colors filled St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church for the marriage of Marion Evelyn Cox and William Alexander (Sandy) McPherson. Rev. Father J. Jackson performed the double-ring ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Cox and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. McPherson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a striking ensemble of heavy white satin embossed with roses. The floor-length gown was fashioned on simple A-lines with bell-shaped sleeves. Over it the bride wore a full-length cape of matching fabric edged with white silk cord, and complete with lined hood. A tiny seed pearl tiara was on her head, and she carried a white Bible adorned with white orchids and pearlsprinkled white satin streamers.

Mrs. Robert Welsh, matron of honor, wore a street-length sleeveless dress of avocado green embossed satin, with matching ring hat. Mrs. Robert Price and Mrs. Charles Cox, as bridesmaids, wore similar ensembles in deep rose. All three attendants carried sprays of white gardenia and yellow ribbons.

Mr. William Black was best man and the ushers were the groom's brother, Mr. Alan McPherson, and Mr. Barry Allingham.

A reception for 250 guests was held in Willow Point Hall. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake topped by an arrangement of dark red rosebuds, and embedded in white tulle intertwined with the same color rosebuds.

In the receiving line along with parents of bride and groom, were the groom's maternal grandmother, Mrs. G. G. Yeatman of Quathlaesi Cove, and his paternal grandfather, James McPherson, Sr. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Gerry Strouken. For a honeymoon to Southern California and Nevada, the bride wore a checked wool suit in shades of brown, with gold-colored high necked sweater, white leather hat and yellow rosebud corsage. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. McPherson will reside in Campbell River.

Cable Car Hurtles Down Hill

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — "We were stopped at the top of the hill, and the gripman told me, 'We don't have the rope, shall we do down with just the brakes?'"

"And I answered, okay," said the conductor, Louis Ables. "I thought they were kidding," said a passenger, Saddle Douglas, but the six-ton, open air cable car and its passengers nosed down the steep Hyde Street hill in the rainy darkness.

'I REMEMBER CAR'
"I knew we wouldn't stop," said Jim Kasek, recently returned from Vietnam and on his first cable car ride.

"I remember the car, a white sedan. I remember it because I knew we were going to hit it." "The cable car kept gaining speed — the cars had the light and there was a big crash and a sheet of flame," said Shirley Caro, 21.

"We must have been going 60 miles an hour," added Miss Douglas after her five-block horror.

TOSSED LIKE TOYS
The cable car, its passengers screaming, smashed Sunday into two autos, tossing them ahead like toys against parked cars. Rivulets of flaming gasoline shot down the hill in the cable car's wake.

When it shattered to a stop at the end of the Powell-Hyde line, 40 persons were injured. A child was still in critical condition Monday.

Ironically, if the speeding cable car had not been slowed by the auto crashes, it might have had trouble making a 90-degree turn at the hill's base at the edge of San Francisco Bay.

DRINKS ALL FAILED
The accident, the tourist attraction's worst since 1915, was one that just wasn't supposed to happen. First, "the rope was dropped," meaning the pinchers had lost hold of the underground cable.

Then, four different sets of brakes failed to do their job. One of them is a piece of metal that penetrates the cable slot in the pavement below until wedged tight by friction and heat.

At Mission Emergency Hospital the conductor, Louis Ables, 24, told police, "All these people are hurt, and it's all my fault."

The gripman, Arthur Coats, 41, was heard to murmur, "I wish I were dead."

Coats completed training for his job just six weeks ago.

Discrimination Charged

Sooke Zoning Attacked

A new zoning regulation covering about 35 lots in the Sooke district is discriminatory and detrimental to the whole area, according to Larry Sutherland, owner of Coast Shellfish Ltd. at Sooke.

Mr. Sutherland said Monday that a recent move by the provincial municipal affairs department to zone his shellfish business as a residential area, will discourage other businessmen from coming to Sooke.

"When I started building, there were no zoning regulations here at all," he said.

"I spent $30,000 on the buildings and driveways, and then it was decided to zone this particular area as residential property."

Mr. Sutherland said he owned the only commercial property in the newly zone areas.

"This just has to be directed at me," he said.

"There is no zoning plan in Sooke, and no zoning regulations for the area, except for this new one."

"I wouldn't mind if this was the result of an over-all plan, but it's just spot zoning, which the minister has said he wants to avoid."

Mr. Sutherland said he had informed people what his intentions were, and no one objected. He had applied for all necessary permits, and complied with regulations.

Now he will not be allowed to expand his business, or to sell it as a growing concern.

Bi and Bi Report Scores Teaching

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says a report of the Royal Commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, to be released today, has stinging words for French-Canadian teaching and the treatment of French-speaking students in Ontario.

The newspaper says the report places heavy emphasis on the role of education and includes an analysis of 14 French-Canadian textbooks used to teach Canadian history.

"Any resemblance between these textbooks and similar ones used in English Canada is rather superficial," the newspaper quotes the report.

"French-Canadian students receive a description of the last 100 years which dwells heavily on the aftermath of the English 'conquest' and the need for French-Canadian culture to survive."

The story says another section of the report, published as a separate document, presents the other side of the French- and English-Canadian question in an analysis of how French-speaking students in Ontario compare with their English-speaking counterparts.

The analysis showed French-speaking students complained of an unspoken bias whenever they attended predominantly English-speaking schools.

Denis Denies Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Raymond Denis, taking the witness box in his own defence, testified Monday that he never offered Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne a $20,000 bribe in the Lucien Rivard affair three years ago.

"I swear on the Holy Gospel that I have never offered money to Mr. Lamontagne," Denis said on the 14th day of his trial on a charge of attempted obstruction of justice.

PRISON TERM

The former executive assistant to the federal immigration minister was accused by Lamontagne of making the offer to persuade Lamontagne to agree to bail for Rivard.

Rivard, 52, now is serving a 20-year prison term for narcotics smuggling in Atlanta, Ga. He was extradited from Canada in 1965 for trial in Texas at the request of the United States government.

Lamontagne, a school acquaintance and political friend of Denis, was acting as counsel for the U.S. in legal steps in Montreal to extradite Rivard.

$20,000 OFFER

Denis, 35-year-old lawyer, began his testimony after defence counsel Louis Assaly informed the jury of 12 men that the charge against his client had been changed to include reference to a $20,000 bribe.

He had originally been charged with attempting to obstruct justice by trying to dissuade Lamontagne from opposing bail. No mention was made in this count of the $20,000 offer which was inserted during the jury's absence from the courtroom.

Denis testified that in May, June and July, 1964, one of his many duties included obtaining information with which then immigration minister Rene Tremblay could reply to criticism in Parliament and privately, about "immigration scandals" connected with holding immigrants in jail without grounds.

Perfect Messiah Sellout Good Omen

High Hope Justified

By BILL THOMAS

Handel's oratorio, the Messiah, is a work filled with a long time when the House Full notice has been posted.

The concert Sunday, sponsored by The Daily Colonist, was high on perfect. Everything worked out well. The orchestra used the Mozart orchestration to advantage, the choir was well trained and free from the horrors of electronic imbalance, and the soloists were in excellent voice.

Sang with Conviction

Happily, I was quite wrong. Miss Glass sang her role well and with conviction.

Donald McManus tackled the bass parts with great dramatic effect but a bad cold played havoc with his diction. It can be argued that the words of this work are so familiar that it does not matter but I can't go along with this.

Mr. McManus has a fine voice, full of warmth and color. He did sing well, but he has sung better.

The greatest surprise of all was the quality of voice shown by Ruth Champion. This soprano has a great potential, and certainly the right voice for Handel.

The performance went at a fast clip thanks to the precise direction of conductor Laszlo Gati, and chorus master Rodney Webster made a valuable contribution in presenting Mr. Gati with a well-disciplined choir.

It was a delight to hear Vancouver tenor Richard Loney in this work. He has just the right voice for oratorio singing. His diction was perfectly clear and his capacity to sustain his notes in the best Handel style a joy to the ear.

For my part, I anticipated the singing of Audrey Glass with some misgiving, for I had allowed myself to be convinced that the Messiah was not for her voice.

Miss Champion's diction and projection were beautiful. She sustained her notes clearly and carried well even in the ensemble material.

To make the afternoon complete, even the smaller things went well. The performance by Robin Wood on the harpsichord made a great contribution. Cellist Hans Siegrist played a steadily, smooth continuo for the soloists.

Assistant choirmaster and organist Richard Proudman applied himself to the production of a restrained sound that was in perfect taste, and trumpeters David Fisher and Martin Van Kemenade played with flair and fine tone.

The theatre was jammed, and the box office was forced to sell tickets normally reserved for season-ticket holders when they did not show up. Half an hour before the start of the concert, patrons were lined up to Blanshard Street. Some were even forced to sit in the aisles until they could be seated.

It was gratifying to see a full house, but the more so in that the artists proved both the symphony and choral society are capable of producing a first-class product.

This could be indicative of a genuine revival of interest in the orchestra and the choral society. It is to be hoped its momentum can be carried into the year ahead.

Lahr Liked Godot Better

Cowardly Lion Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Bert Lahr, 72, the beloved Cowardly Lion of The Wizard of Oz and veteran of countless stage and movie roles, died Monday.

Lahr's death at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center was attributed to a massive internal hemorrhage. He had been under treatment since Nov. 21 for a back ailment and pneumonia.

One of the great comic actors, Lahr's career spanned some 50 years and ranged from the classic Cowardly Lion in The Wizard of Oz to Estragon in the difficult Waiting for Godot.

Which did he like best? "Strangely enough," he said once, "it was Waiting for Godot. It was controversial. Those that hated it, spit at it. Yet it had its cult, and it created a different type of audience for me."

"It was like—it was like playing Carnegie Hall. It changed my whole career. Before that I was a buffoon. This gave me a chance to play Shaw and Moore."

But it is as a clown that Lahr will be remembered by millions who saw him—and who will see him—as the Cowardly Lion.

Lahr was born in New York City, Aug. 13, 1895, not far from the expensive Fifth Avenue apartment that came with success. As a teenager, he joined a children's vaudeville act called Nine Crazy Kids.

"It was horrible," he said, "but I got the bug, you know."

Garden Notes

Try Drumsticks

By M. V. CHESNUT

Any gardener who has mastered the technique of growing good specimens of polyanthus primrose should have a go at Primula denticulata, the Drumstick primrose. This Asiatic primula from the Himalayas isn't any more difficult to grow but it is quite distinctive and decidedly different from the better-known polyanthus.

The plant gets its common name, Drumstick primrose, from the shape of the flowers — rounded heads on stout stems nine to 15 inches long, looking for all the world like those sticks used for whacking a big bass drum. The leaves and stems are usually covered in a floury meal, often mistaken for mildew by inexperienced gardeners.

The type plant has lilac-mauve or pale purple flowers with a yellow eye, but there is a pure white form and several very beautiful named varieties. Spring Maid is a clear pink shade; Purple Beauty, in spite of its name, is more of a violet than a true purple. Hay's Variety is a very fine flower in dark maroon, while Stormy Red has bright rosy crimson blooms. Most of these start flowering in April, although in mild years I have had the odd bloom open before the end of February.

These named varieties, of course, must be purchased as plants or scoured from your neighbor when he is lifting and dividing his clumps in the fall. They can also be propagated from root cuttings, and it isn't too much of a job to work up a good stock of plants from a few well-chosen specimens. One of our B.C. nurserymen lists the type plant in his catalogue at 50 cents each; I imagine the named varieties would run a bit higher.

Primula denticulata is not particularly difficult to grow from seed although, mind you, no seedman can guarantee what color the flowers will be when the parents are unknown. This flower is exceptionally popular with the bees — it must secrete a rich nectar to bring them around in such swarms — and when bees do the pollinating, the pollen from the male parent may come from an unknown primrose several gardens away, hence the uncertainty.

This element of chance in the growing of drumsticks from seed makes the venture all the more exciting, for you never know when you may come up with an entirely new color or combination of colors. The seeds are not easy to come by in this country — most certainly you won't find them in the seed racks of the corner store — but seedsmen stocking English seeds may have them, or you can always send directly to the Old Country for them. My favorite British firm, Thompson & Morgan of Ipswich, lists five different kinds priced at 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per packet.

While freezing is not strictly necessary with reasonably fresh seed, I think a touch of frost speeds up germination. One good way is to place your pinch of seeds in the centre of a small square of aluminum foil, moisten them with a single drop of water, fold over the foil to seal tightly, and place in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator for a week. Remove into room temperature for two days, then back into the freezer for another week, then sow thinly in pots of sterilized soil, covering them with a quarter-inch layer of peat moss. Give one good watering with hot but not boiling water, then water normally and sparingly thereafter.

The subsequent treatment is about the same as for polyanthus, except that the drumsticks need a bit more water and must never be allowed to go bone dry through the summer months. While its preference is for damp, rich, loamy soil with a bit of leafmould in it, I have seen drumsticks growing in fairly heavy clay and doing very nicely indeed.

Ponders Perplexities

How is it that the mind of man is able to devise the most complex, ingenious and awe-inspiring mechanisms — and yet is unable to find some way of keeping small children happy and occupied during two consecutive rainy days when they are house-bound?

Why do we clamor for the "latest" novel in a bookshop, and demand the "newest" play in the theatre, but at the same time insist upon only the oldest music in the concert hall?

Why is it generally the same women who are always busy "cleaning the house" who rarely invite anyone over to enjoy it?

When will we begin to learn that the price we pay for being perpetually entertained by professionals is the atrophy of our ability to entertain ourselves?

Why does a "milkster" or electric typewriter make me feel as if I'm not writing anything that has any lasting imprint?

What distorted sense of style makes some men wear those matching belt-and-handkerchief sets?

Why do we try to justify certain of our acts by saying

"I'm not hurting anyone but myself," and fail to realize that if each man used his power to hurt himself, society would disintegrate?

Why is it that a man who prides himself on "liking to look at a problem from all angles" becomes so enraged looking at a modern painting that can just as easily be hung sideways or upside down?

Why is it a "lie" when children tell us they have washed their hands and they haven't, whereas when we ask them to answer the phone and say we're not home, it's just "social form"?

Why do the same people who say "Money isn't everything," usually eat most of the time as though it were an effective substitute for anything else?

Why is a French accent in English considered "charming," and an Italian accent considered "comical" — especially since Italian is the more beautiful language of the two?

How many men call themselves "individualists" who can hardly be distinguished from their neighbors, who call themselves the same thing?

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Sinatras to Make Up

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Don't be surprised when Mia Farrow announces her retirement from the screen when she completes her starring role in Paramount's Rosemary's Baby. And at about the same time, if not before, an announcement of her reconciliation with Frank Sinatra. The reason for the break-up was not so much that Mia loves to dance and Frank doesn't but that her ambition to be a movie star had kept them separated for most of their brief marriage. "She still loves him," my source informed me. "They have been in touch, and she will do anything he asks to get him back." Frankie doesn't often change his mind and he has suffered this past year, but I believe they will be under the same roof in time for a happy Christmas.

Alan Alda will play George Plimpton in the film version of Paper Lion... and James Baldwin will write the screen play for the No. 1 best seller, The Confessions of Nat Turner.

Obviously the daughter of Shelley Winters and Vittorio Gassman has no thought of a film career. The 14-year-old, tall, pretty Victoria could have played a part in Dad's Catch as Catch Can last summer in Italy. She turned it down. Also said no to a role in Wild in the Streets. She has time... Where, oh where is Eddie Fisher? Not even his press agents seem to know. He's probably closeted somewhere with Connie Stevens and their baby... Sal Mineo and Nancy Sinatra, Junior, are planning a picture which Sal is writing and in which Nancy will star. He is currently completing East of Java, somewhere west of Mandalay, Spain, to be exact.

For the first time in years Debbie Reynolds may be spending Christmas at home with her children. Generally the family gathers in Las Vegas where Debbie is usually performing. She is tired from films and her TV special and the thought of going nowhere simply thrills her.

Michael Crawford's next is for Joe McGrath, Special Bookings, about a young man who works in a travel agency and who is in love with the boss's wife. He sends the boss to Morocco and I don't have to tell you the rest if you remember King David and Uriah.

George Sanders was ruminating at the Rainbow Room that he intends to retire when he hits 70. He still has a few years to go, but no more inventions for George. Not since he lost most of his money in that sausage scheme. It was such an obvious phony it's amazing George fell for it. But the smarter they are the harder they fall... Stella Stevens' Playboy layout is quite a contrast to the nun's habit she wore in Where Angels Go... Trouble Follows.

ART BUCHWALD Gets a New Look

Sloshed in Translation

TOKYO — Every author is flattered when his article appears in another language, so you can imagine how excited I became when I heard that my columns were being translated into Japanese.

The Tokyo Observer has been using them on a weekly basis, and since I happened to be in Japan, I was curious to know how they read in the translation.

A friend of mine was kind enough to re-translate one of the articles back into English, word for word as it appeared in Japanese.

It happened to be the article on the U.S. government report encouraging families to drink together in a homelike setting. This is how the readers of the Observer saw it.

Prohibit Sake sales Thorough Method U.S. government suggestion carry out alcohol poisoning of study and research results made public.

This study announcement according sake drinking society national policy must be, it is said. Children, sake drink home, possible much more effective, report say.

In France, where long time live I, this expected result deliver, confidence I do not have. French children grape sake drink with results of greatest alcohol poisoning.

In France, calvados as thing of recall. Here greatest apple brandy produce. Mothers in the morning, children brandy one cup sake make. Attending school thousands birds feet of children stagger along. Therefore teachers protest has happened.

If announced study results correct, let's see family inside how drinking sake encouraged is.

Place: Thomson house.

Time: Evening-six o'clock.

Thomson Mr., ten generation of son George big voice call:

George! Martini one cup make want me?

George: Not necessary, Papa. Milk drink want.

Thomson Mr.: Right away come down martini drink. Otherwise evening meal not give.

George: Understand Papa. But Mama lunch box put white grape sake, not yet intoxication wake up.

Thomson Mr.: Martini, about one glass drink, harm not. Moreover, drink alcohol and poisoning suffer not.

George second story from Karen: Back again. This evening of meal what?

Thomson Mrs.: Sherry sake inside turtle soup with cow meat of burgundy sauce boil, and white grape sake dressing of salad. Eat after of dessert brandy cherry and then whiskey inside coffee.

Thomson Mrs.: Karen, whiskey sour pickle mandarin orange, eat did not?

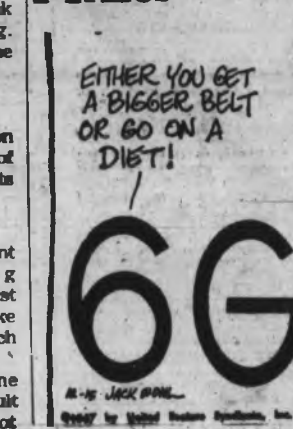

Karen: I mandarin orange do not like should know you. Thomson Mr.: Freddy nine, where is?

Thomson Mrs.: Bed at resting. Last night you bought whiskey, bon-bon. Big drunk have he.

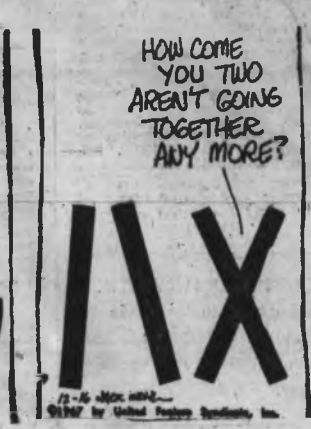

Thomson Mr.: Between meals eat must not. Freddy thousand birds feet with second story come down. Freddy: Stomach awfully empty.

Thomson Mrs.: Cold storage sake in beer cool, therefore drink.

No Lynching For Canadian

APALACHICOLA, Fla. (AP)

A Canadian prisoner accused of murdering a policeman with a stolen gun has been spirited out of this small Florida Panhandle town to save him from a possible lynch mob.

He remained hidden at an undisclosed jail Monday while the sheriff's office polished its case. David Edward Barlow, 29, of Guelph, Ont., was charged with first-degree murder in the Friday night shooting of Patrolman Fred Bebb.

Police said Barlow was captured after a 23-mile chase at 100 miles an hour when he crashed Bebb's patrol car into a pine tree.

After an hour in the Franklin County jail in northwest Florida, Sheriff H. O. Marshall and deputies sneaked him out the back door and took him to another jail because a mob of 100 to 150 angry persons gathered in front of the building.

"The town got pretty hot," Marshall said. "It looked like we might have a lynching party, so we moved him for his own safety."

Marshall said a gun taken from Barlow was the one used to kill Bebb, shot down when he tried to arrest a man for allegedly stealing a deputy's car at gunpoint from the sheriff's office.

Marshall said the .357 magnum had been identified through ballistics as the weapon that was used to shoot the 36-year-old policeman in the head and hand.

After running a police roadblock where the car was disabled by a rifle bullet, the vehicle crashed into a tree. Police said Barlow was flushed from under a nearby home by a posse.

Marshall said Barlow is accused of holding up a liquor store in Tallahassee and stealing two other cars including the one in which the gun was hidden.

Weather ship Quadra

By MARK DICKINSON

The $12,000,000 weather ship Quadra, with 95 aboard, has been dodging tragedy for the past five days, and Monday night coast guard officials were crossing their fingers and hoping she would reach port without further troubles this morning.

The 5,400-ton vessel is suffering leaks in her superstructure, water-damaged electronic controls and a breakdown in one of her three turbo-generators.

And as a result she was forced to leave Station Papa, 800 miles west of Victoria, two days ahead of schedule.

The ship is also running short of fuel for her engines and helium for weather balloons, according to district marine agent Larry Slaght. "We're keeping our fingers crossed," Mr. Slaght said. "We're having more than our fair share of problems."

Threat to the ship's propulsion occurred early Friday when a part of one turbo-generator seized up. But she cut in her standby generator and was still able to develop full power with the two units.

A few hours after the engine trouble hit the Quadra,

Friday's storm smashed through her patrol area.

Forty-foot waves and 85-mile-an-hour winds battered the vessel, causing the leaks in her superstructure and sending her more than 150 miles off her station.

The superstructure leaks let water into the electrical control system, but the extent of the damage is not yet known here, Mr. Slaght said.

Because of rough seas, the Quadra was forced to steam westerly into the storm.

"She could not turn around in those waves," he said.

"This caused her to get out of her patrol area and use up a lot of fuel."

He said he did not know the

Patient's Wife Saw Accident

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—The wife of heart transplant man Louis Washkansky paused to watch a highway accident Saturday without knowing the heart of one of the victims would be used for her husband.

By a strange twist of fate, Mrs. Washkansky saw the accident that killed 25-year-old Denise Ann Darvall—whose heart was used by surgeons shortly after she died in the historic transplant operation.

Mrs. Washkansky was on her way home Saturday from the Groote Schuur Hospital here after visiting her husband.

Montreal May Be Next

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Arthur Vineberg, a well-known Montreal heart specialist, said Monday the Cape Town heart transplant has "a very good chance of success" and predicts the operation may be tried here soon.

Insulin Trial Charge:

Husband Hid Dying Wives

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The prosecution in the insulin murder trial of William Dale Archerd charged Monday he hid three of his wives suffering from insulin shock until it was too late to save them.

In the first day of the trial, prosecutor Raymond Daniels also said Archerd was well acquainted with the dangers of insulin because of his work as an attendant in a state mental hospital.

The silver-haired grandfather, 55, is accused of the insulin deaths of two of his seven wives and a 15-year-old nephew by giving them massive injections of the drug normally used in the treatment of diabetes.

He also is a suspect in the alleged insulin deaths of three other persons, including another wife, which occurred outside Los Angeles County.

The prosecution's attempt to prove insulin was the death weapon is the first such legal effort in the United States.

Daniels, in his opening statement to Judge Adolph Alexander who is trying the case without a jury, said Archerd worked in the insulin shock ward at Canarillo State Hospital, and during a period from 1939 to 1941 was taught the dangers of the drug.

The prosecutor also said he intended to display records from the hospital which would show Archerd actually injected the drug into other attendants experimentally.

Daniels said Zella Winders Archerd, 46, the defendant's fourth wife; Juanita Plum Archerd, 46, his fifth wife, and novelist Mary Brinker Post Arden, 60, his seventh wife, were secreted or hidden away

Skindiver Slain, Mistaken for Gator

MARSHALL, Tex. (UPI)—Skindiver James Clark, 35, participating in a fishing contest, surfaced in a lake near here Sunday and was shot to death by a hunter who mistook him for an alligator.

Officials of the fishing contest said the area was clearly marked with divers' flags.

DIVORCE BILL UNVEILED

Breakdown Listed Among Grounds

OTTAWA (CP)—A bill that makes marriage breakdown grounds for divorce won enthusiastic first reading in the Commons Monday night.

Adultery, bigamy, physical or mental cruelty, and sodomy, bestiality, rape and homosexuality are listed in the bill as specific grounds.

In addition, either husband or wife when living apart may petition for divorce on the grounds that there has been a permanent breakdown in their marriage.

However, marriage breakdown must be proved in the courts, Justice Minister Trudeau said.

The breakdown must be based on one of the following circumstances:

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than three of the five years prior to the petition;

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than two years prior to the petition but on a sentence of death or more than 10 years, with the appeal process exhausted;

● The respondent has for not less than three years before the petition been "grossly addicted to alcohol or a narcotic" without reasonable expectation of rehabilitation;

● The petitioner has refused from or has been unable to locate the partner for three years;

● The petitioner hasn't heard to consummate the marriage or has been unable to because of illness or disability for at least one year;

● The couple has been separated for at least five years because of desertion of the petitioner;

The couple has been separated for any other reason for not less than three years.

A barrage of complimentary speeches followed introduction of the bill by Trudeau, a 46-year-old Montreal bachelor.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) said the minister has

'Nothing Moving'

Record Snowfall Hits Fredericton

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fredericton was crippled with record 25 inches of snow, Monday, while other sections of New Brunswick escaped with a less severe pounding from a province-wide storm.

"There's nothing moving here except a few damn fools," said a member of the Fredericton police department.

The police spokesman said snow removal would probably not get started until early today.

BOY KILLED

One person was known to have died as a result of the storm. Five-year-old Michael McGraw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valmond McGraw of the Gloucester County community of Losier Settlement, died when he stepped into the path of a car on a storm-swept highway near his home.

Air Canada cancelled all flights there and at Saint John.

Negroes Held Hostage

DETROIT (AP)—A distraught Negro whose son was killed during Detroit's summer race riot armed himself Monday and held two women, one of them pregnant, and three children as hostages in his home. All the hostages were Negro.

Police surrounded the home of Eugene Ector, who they said had fired several shots before they arrived.

William Watson, a retired Detroit policeman, said he spoke with Ector on the phone.

REMINDERS

"The sight of the police cars upset him," said Watson, 50, a veteran of 25 years on the police force. "He said 'they remind me of my son.'"

Ector's son, Herman, 30, was shot and killed on July 24, one of the 43 persons who died in the July race riot. Murder charges were filed against a private guard in connection with the shooting of the younger Ector.

Some 30 policemen surrounded Ector's home and ordered cars in the area to turn off their lights. No lights were visible in Ector's house. The hostages apparently were unharmed.

Brownies Help to Give Joy

The spirit of Christmas wore a Brownie uniform last week, as a group of elfin girls decided what they would give rather than what they wanted for Christmas.

They took their treasures and sold them so that children without treasures will know on Christmas Day that there is joy in the world.

Brownies of the 11th Victoria Pack held a fair, selling jewelry, comics, dolls and doll clothes, games, candy and popcorn—items they had donated themselves.

Monday they brought $25 to the Colonist 500 Fund.

The donation was made up of pennies, nickels and dimes and Victoria's needy will be glad of every cent.

It was part of $432 brought into the office—nearly $1 on every cheque which will go out on Christmas Eve to 500 people on Victoria's special gift list.

What can the money mean to the people who get the cheques?

For one woman, alone with eight children, it means something for the Christmas table.

"I got a cheque one year," she said. "It came as a complete surprise for me on Christmas Eve."

"I got some last-minute

things for Christmas and Boxing Day."

"I'd bought the children some small, very practical gifts, and neglected some small bills to do it."

"The money I had left over from the cheque paid off the bills."

Her children range in age from seven to 17.

"We've been on social assistance for six years, now."

Johnny Unitas and the Baltimore Colts did it again Sunday. Led by their master craftsman, the Colts remained professional football's only unbeaten club with a come-from-behind 23-17 victory over Dallas Cowboys before more than 60,000 ecstatic Baltimore fans.

Victory kept the Colts atop the Coastal Division of the National Football League's Western Conference and could enable them to clinch it by next Sunday.

The Baltimore club is a game ahead of Los Angeles Rams, 20-3 winners over Atlanta Falcons Sunday, with a break in the remaining two games of the schedule.

RAMS COULD TIE

Rams must get by Green Bay Packers next Sunday to keep their hopes alive while the Colts face New Orleans Saints, who have won but two of 12 games.

However, should both contenders win, the Rams could force a playoff the following Sunday, when they host the Colts in the final scheduled game.

Unitas had his troubles with the tough Cowboys. Colts got away to a 10-0 lead on a field goal by Lou Michaels and a touchdown pass from Unitas to Ray Berry, who made a leaping end zone catch on his first play since coming off the injured list.

COWBOYS HAD LEAD

But a poor punt, a fumble recovery and an interception returned 26 yards for a touchdown by 265-pound linebacker Dave Edwards had the Cowboys in front by 17-10 after three quarters.

Michals kicked two more field goals, one a 53-yarder which appeared to give the Colts the lift they needed, to get close. Then Unitas did it again by calmly producing the winning touchdown in the late minutes.

Getting the ball at mid-field after a punt, Unitas passed for 12 yards to John Mackey and to 19 yards to Willie Richardson on a march which ended with Lenny Moore slicing through a big hole for the last two yards with only 90 seconds left.

WIN IN LOSING

Despite the defeat, the Cowboys were able to clinch honors in the Capital Division of the Eastern Conference when Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins wrecked each other's chances by playing to a 35-35 tie.

Likely opponents for the Cowboys in one playoff semifinal are Cleveland Browns, who clipped New York Giants, 24-14. Result left the Browns needing one victory, or one defeat for the Giants and St. Louis Cardinals to clinch.

Packers, their playoff spot clinched a week previously again had trouble with Minnesota Vikings before a fumble by Joe Kapp gave them a chance for a field goal by Don Chandler just eight seconds from time which brought a 30-27 victory.

Chicago Bears, the most improved club in the league, got an outstanding performance from Gale Sayers in handing San Francisco 49ers a sixth straight loss.

Sayers ran 97 yards with the opening kickoff for one touchdown, galloped 15 yards around left end on a broken play for another six points, then eked his performance by taking a punt 58 yards for a third major score.

HOUSTON (UPI)—Don Floyd, defensive end for the Houston Oilers, was gawking about the stunning blonde that ran up to the bench and kissed him during a game with the Miami Dolphins Sunday.

Floyd didn't see the romantic aspects of the situation, all he saw was the finger pointing accusingly at him for the distraction.

"I'm having a bad season," he noted after the game. The coach is a little down on me because I'm not playing well. They'll think I had something to do with it. I didn't," Floyd bellyached.

The buxom trophy hunter stalked the football field while 28,000 fans and 7,400 Boy Scouts watched.

ATTENTION-GETTER

She was identified by Oilers officials as Bubbles Cash, who has drawn attention at several of the Dallas Cowboys' games. She left her seat after an Oiler pass play had been called back and intercepted the referee on the 20-yard line.

It wasn't hard to distinguish her from the players. Conservative estimates put the Dallas night club entertainer's measurements at 42-24-38, all crowded into a tight and low black sweater and a mini-skirt.

The press box missed two plays watching her. Bubbles gave up getting the football at the 42-yard line and ran over to the Oiler bench and kissed Floyd twice.

And Floyd grumbled.

Oilers won the game, 17-14, and moved into a tie with New York Jets for the American Football League's Eastern Division lead.

BRONCOS HELP

Helping make that possible were Denver Broncos. The Western Division trailers came up with a fantastic second quarter in which they packed three touchdowns and two field goals into 10 minutes to upset New York Jets, 33-24.

Included in the scoring binge was a spectacular 72-yard punt return for a touchdown by rookie-back Floyd Little, who later suffered a broken collar bone which will sideline him for the season.

FOUR TD PASSES

Meanwhile, Oakland Raiders all but clinched the Western Division championship by routing San Diego's second-place Chargers, 41-21, behind the passing of Darrell Lamonica.

The former Notre Dame star, obtained for this season in a trade with Buffalo Bills, threw four touchdown passes as his club moved a game and a half in front of the Chargers with three games left for both clubs.

Oakland's victory mathematically eliminated Kansas City Chiefs. The defuncted champions defeated the Bills, 23-12, but are three and a half games back with only two games left.

Duncan Rink Bows In Bonspiel Final

VANCOUVER — John French of the North Shore Winter Club skipped Pat Lyle, Norm Jorgensen and Gordon Campbell to victory in the annual Totem Bonspiel on Sunday night, defeating Gary Merrett's Duncan rink, 12-5, in the final of the Totem event.

Merrett's rink included Bo Reynolds, Doug Belton and Paul Williams.

Gary Bailey of the Vancouver Curling Club, who was supported by Howie Christopherson, George McCord and Evan Wolfe, won the Evergreen event by defeating Harry Shyshka of Nanaimo (Herman Dyck, Joe Bads, Cliff Livingstone).

Shyshka reached the final by defeating clubmate Bob Fuller. Lyle Dagg of Vancouver, who defeated Lloyd Kearns of Victoria in the semi-final, won the Burnaby event by defeating Harold Wheeler of Burnaby.

Other event winners in the six-event, 128-rink bonspiel were Jack Crane of the Capilano Winter Club (Capilano event), Paul Barrett of Haney (Pacific event) and Lorne Owens of the Heather Curling Club (Vancouver event).

Bay Bs Bow To St. Louis

St. Louis College defeated the Oak Bay "B" team 52-35 in an Inter-High School Boys Basketball game played Monday.

Fred Winfield led the winners with 19 points and Pat Griffin added 11 points.

Jamie Henderson was top man for the losers with 13 points.

Next game: Thursday — IGA vs. KIL last night.

It wasn't disappointment or seasickness which kept the expressions of Victoria Chinooks officials Harold and Moe Turner subdued Sunday on the return ferry trip from Vancouver. It was a tired relief.

With Barry Turner leading the way, Chinooks retained a share of first place in the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League with a heart-stopping, 79-78, overtime victory over CYO Saints.

The win dropped CYO into third place while IGA Grocers, who have played two more games than Chinooks, retained a share of the league lead with a 61-51 victory over University of Victoria Jayvees at Gordon Head.

Barry Turner, who finished with 14 points, scored the first six points of the overtime period to mark the victory. He had missed several games with a leg injury.

The teams were deadlocked, 70-70, at the end of regulation time.

Chinooks were in control most of the way but Saints tied the game, 62-62, with six minutes left and led, 68-62, three minutes later but Victoria refused to panic and scored the next eight points.

Ken Elmer, who finished with 28 points, scored the overtime period when he scored just as the horn went.

Grocers built up a 21-point lead in the third quarter at Gordon Head and held off the winless Jayvees desperate comeback attempt.

University of Victoria Vikings forged to the front of the Victoria Rugby Union's first division on Sunday as they dumped Cowichan 12-3.

Vikings broke a first place tie with Castaways as two penalty goals by Rick Pyke and tries by Bob McFarlane and Tom Fugh carried them to their win over last-place Cowichan.

In another first division match played Sunday, James Bay Athletic Association and Oak Bay wendelers staged a spectacular struggle and finally wound up in an 11-11 deadlock.

Oak Bay was led by the fine kicking of Don Burgess who kicked a penalty goal, a drop goal, and a conversion. Mitch Hughes scored the lone try for the Bays.

James Bay finished with three tries — by Tom Bourne, Tom Kroll and Rod Fiddick — and a conversion by Mick Eckhardt.

University's second division squad stomped over Cowichan 24-3 while Ken Fox was displaying kicking perfection in leading Mount Newton to a 15-13 triumph over Cowichan in a fourth division match. Fox converted all three tries scored by his club.

Duncan Hospital

Fire Rules Kill Plan

DUNCAN — The old King's Daughters' Hospital is now boarded up and will not be used again for medical care. Its future though is still uncertain.

The Cowichan District Hospital board recently inquired whether the old hospital could be used as an extended care unit until a new one is built at the new hospital.

The new extended care unit is now in the planning stage.

In a reply to the local board, the manager of the hospital consultation and inspection division advised "Both the fire marshal and the inspector of electrical energy have indicated that the old Duncan hospital is unsuitable for institutional care of any kind, certainly without a substantial expenditure on renovations."

"The chief inspector of welfare institutions has intimated that he is similarly unwilling to recommend to the welfare institutions board that a licence be issued for the building to be used as a boarding home."

"I am quite sure that the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service would not be prepared to recommend the building be used for extended hospital care without renovations of such magnitude that the cost would be as great as for new construction."

"In the meantime, various proposals have been made to deal with the urgent need for extended hospital care beds in the Duncan area, bearing in mind the general shortage of long-term beds on Vancouver Island and the imminent closure of Mary Hospital at Cobble Hill by the Salvation Army."

Nanaimo Accident Injures Paperboy

NANAIMO — Guy Lynn, 13, 2078 Bluebell Terrace, was driving a borrowed bicycle, while delivering his papers Monday night, at the corner of Spencer and Northfield Road.

The bike had no lights, and when he stopped to pick up papers which dropped from his bag, he was hit by a car driven by Victor Bateman, 2550 Killarney Place.

The boy was taken to Nanaimo Regional Hospital by Mark Landers, a passing motorist, where he received several stitches to a cut above his left eye, and was subsequently released.

PORT ALBERNI — MLA Dr. Howard MacDiarmid is happy the Gibson Family has given the area at Hot Springs Cove to the province. But it doesn't stop his plans for a marine park.

"Unfortunately this does not include the actual hot springs. In winter, the area is rough, rough, rough. It would be open to boating in good weather months only," he said when the next session of the legislature opens, he will push for a west coast national marine park.

YOUBOU — Bill Thompson had no opposition as he ran for another term as trustee for this area. He replaced the late Harry Hobson earlier this year. There had been reports that Mr. Thompson would be opposed.

COURTENAY — Randy Klaver will head the chamber of commerce here in the next year. The businessman will be installed at a dinner in January. Others on the executive include Fred Bosson, first vice-president; David Kirk, second vice-president; Gerry Wise, treasurer; and Hans Frank, secretary. Susie Lloyd is past president.

CHEMAINUS — Lumber exports from Chemainus and Crofton were 2,000,000 board feet more during November than in the previous month. Japan took more than 20,000,000 board feet of lumber. Other commodities exported included 207 tons of plywood, 9,000 tons of pulp, and 8,000 tons of newsprint.

PORT ALBERNI — Export shipping from this port in November reached the second highest level since the port started operation. Harbormaster Don Brooks said the month was second only to March of this year. Lumber was the big ex-

NANAIMO — A two-storey ugly building, which might have been the object of a city request for demolition, has been transformed into a beautiful and functional three-level office building.

The Zorkin block, housing one of the city's largest real estate firms, on Fitzwilliam Street, has used modern day techniques and design, and incorporated them with ingenuity of craftsman and artists, to produce a comfortable and businesslike suite of offices over 9,000 feet square.

Dr. Mladin Zorkin said, while conducting a tour of the offices, during the preview opening, "We have to show in Nanaimo that we have standards equal to or better than New York."

As he made the comment, he passed through a stairwell decorated by a local artist, depicting modern day trends of industry in B.C.

Band Gets Benefit of Rough Years

Help from Hard Life

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Bill Boychuck was once a totally crippled poor farm boy from the Ukraine.

He overcame those handicaps, and now he is working hard to help members of the Cowichan band overcome another kind of crippling handicap, the problem of being Indians in a white country.

Mr. Boychuck, 41, was called in to help the band by housing manager Abner Thorne. He is working on a house-building project at a new subdivision on Boggs Road.

Just Dust

The small, grey-haired man, who still shows traces of his severe physical handicap, recognized his chance to implement his plan, which had gathered dust in the files of the Indian Affairs Department at Ottawa for the past five years.

His plan to get Indians self-respect and independence from the public tax coffers, is simple.

Union Help

It is the training of native people on the job under supervision, and with the help of some union carpenters who are willing to co-operate.

Mr. Boychuck's road from his cradle at Fort William, Ont., to the site of the building project on the Cowichan Indian Reserve, has been cruel.

He was eight months old when his mother took him to her home village in the Bukovina, then a possession of Rumania, east of the Carpathian mountains in central Europe.

The primitive standard of life in the village left ever lasting impressions on Bill's memory.

Food Gone

He still sees soldiers stripping all fruit trees and stealing food, leaving the villagers with little to survive.

"Sometimes I was so hungry I ate grass."

In 1935 Bill and his mother left behind the mud brick, thatched huts and returned to the more affluent Canada, which still stood as a golden promise in his mother's mind.

For the boy, however, the arrival at Coquitlam, B.C., marked the beginning of his greatest privations.

Heavy Hand

The beatings by his father because the small boy did not learn English fast enough, and the subsequent intervention by the RCMP, is still etched on Bill's mind.

He was taken to hospital at 3 a.m. one morning after a severe beating, but his young body soon recovered.

Indians Learn To Construct

DUNCAN—A pilot pre-apprenticeship carpenter's training course has started on the Cowichan Indian reserve on Boys Road near the new Indian subdivision building site.

The course is being conducted by Don Proudlove of Victoria.

He is being paid by the Indian Affairs department, which is supplying the tools for the 11 students.

The program is a combined effort between the Cowichan Indian band, the Indian Affairs department and the Department of Manpower.

It was instigated by the band's planning committee, under the chairmanship of Abel Joe.

Other committee members are housing manager Abner Thorne and band manager Ross Modeste.

Mr. Proudlove said his students receive theoretical and practical training every day.

Boychuck at work

He came to the Home for Wayward Boys at St. John's School in Burnaby.

The large majority of the boys were Indians, and the first seed of compassion for Indians took root in Bill's mind.

Tears Flow

School and farm chores occupied most of the boy's time but often during evening hours "My tears would roll down my cheeks when I thought of my mother, and often I would fall asleep in the arms of a kind sister and my tears would dry."

However, he still likes to think back to the year at the school.

"It was not a prison, I felt as a free boy, and my small Indian friends taught me many things of their native ways of catching game or how to survive in the bush."

Bad Fall

On a sunny July morning Bill's good life ended with brutal bitterness.

Kicked off a haystack by an older boy, the 11-year-old cracked his skull on the ground. Paralyzed from the neck down, he was put in traction for six months, and then his whole upper body was put in a cast.

In this condition, Bill arrived at a foster home in Vancouver and through therapy and will power, he finally had the full use of one arm and one leg.

When the time for his confirmation came, industrialist Harold Foley decided to be the boy's sponsor. Ever since, Bill's road wound its way upward.

"Harold Foley became my spiritual guide."

"He has been a close friend of mine for many years."

Sailing Off

The later stations of Bill Boychuck's life saw him working in a furniture factory, sailing around the world as a quartermaster on a freighter, becoming foreman in another furniture factory in Vancouver, undergoing surgery with the help of his rich friend to correct his crippled foot, and working as foreman in other furniture factories until disaster struck again.

He lost a finger on his good hand in an industrial accident.

All his misfortunes in his struggle with life made him only more determined to beat his fate.

New Roof

He married and became father of two boys and a girl. He started his own construction company and together with construction engineer Eddy Chow he developed a new roof structure which received wide attention in the industry.

While living in North Vancouver he made friends with that community's late Mayor Charles Cates, operator of a towing company, who directed much of his efforts to aid Indians.

Met Chief

Bill also met the late Willard Sparrow who guided his Musqueam Band in a revolutionary housing program, band manager of the Squamish Band, Jim Nahane, and that band's chief, Simon Baker.

"Suddenly all my happy memories with the Indian boys came back."

"I remembered the games we played, the friends I met, and the things they had told me about their lives before they came to the school."

"That all came back."

Confidence

For several years Bill Boychuck tried in vain to convince the Indian Affairs Department in Ottawa to try his plan to train Indians on the job, to carry out pilot programs of establishing prefab house and furniture factories on Indian reserves to help the native people gain independence and confidence.

Letters were exchanged between Bill and officials at Ottawa, but no action was forthcoming.

Subdivision

Another circle in his life began to close when the Cowichan Indians approached him to help them build their houses in the new subdivision.

His message to Indians has been picked up, and the native people while building their own houses, more and more realize the great satisfaction of mastering their own destiny.

Heavy Snowfall Closes Camps

LAKE COWICHAN—Three large logging companies in the Lake Cowichan area are shut down because of the heavy snowfall.

The Gordon River camp of Western Forest Industries shut down. A few men continued to work moving machinery down from the high mountain levels where the men have been working.

Monday morning the snow was up to five feet deep on the higher levels, and 20 inches where the men would have been working. About 150 men are affected by the closure.

At the Cayouse operation of B.C. Forest Products, some 245 men did not report for work Monday morning, as the snow continued to pile up over the weekend.

Working on a day to day basis, officials at Cayouse said if the weather improves the men will go back to work in a day or two.

Up to 40 inches of snow is reported in the Cayouse operation area.

'Segregation Is No Good'

DUNCAN — "I am strongly convinced of the advantages of Indian children mixing with white children at school," the Cowichan School Board was told by Leonard Antoine Monday night.

As a member of the Cowichan Indian band's education committee, Mr. Antoine has been guest at board meetings for some time.

SCHOOL SWITCH

He made his comments after the board's education committee chairman Joseph Frumento remarked a long standing offer to take children from St. Catherine's Indian School into the public school system, will be discussed with the Indian education committee soon.

St. Catherine's Indian School on Tzouhalem Road has about 120 Grade 1 to Grade 3 students.

NURSERY SCHOOL

It was noted if the children from that school should be taken into the public system, St. Catherine's would probably continue operation as an Indian nursery school.

Mr. Antoine told the board "I have sent my children to the Queen Margaret's School kindergarten (private school at Duncan), and I know from experience it has been very good for them to mix with white children at an early age."

"One of my daughters is now 15 years old and attends Grade 11, and is very interested in IBM."

"Indians should mix, segregation is no good."

The board agreed it is probably much easier for small children to make friends.

The newly-proposed defensive driving course under the Cowichan School District's adult education program, has the endorsement of R. A. Hadfield, superintendent of motor vehicles at Victoria.

The course will start January 17.

Board 'Stupidity' Hit by Socred

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — It looks as though the Liquor Control Board dropped a match in the brandy when it moved the two former liquor outlets into a single consolidated store at the new Safeway shopping centre at Tenth and Redford.

MLA, Howard MacDiarmid has been in touch with the Attorney-General's office to try to have the Margaret Street Store in the former city of Alberni re-opened.

The arbitrary action of the board in making the change with only five hours notice to the public and no notice to city officials he termed "stupid."

Fears expressed by Deputy Mayor Fred Bishop about the traffic problems that would arise, proved more fact than fancy at the weekend.

Because the major construction in the new shopping centre is not yet completed, the greater part of the parking area was shut off, and only one entry, which also doubled as an exit, was left for access to the liquor store.

Inside the liquor store all was space, speed and efficiency.

Outside, lines of cars on either side of the available parking space, left a roadway barely wide enough for two cars to squeeze by.

Aldermanic candidates Mike Ivezich and George McKnight have announced that they will circulate a petition at tonight's meeting, which they are sponsoring in the Somers Legion Hall, asking for all three outlets to be open over the holiday season.

The course will start January 17.

Buffer Zone Biffed

COURTENAY — City council was disappointed to learn a plan to provide low-rental housing has been stopped by a decision of the zoning appeal board.

A developer had presented plans to council for a number of duplex-style homes as a buffer zone in front of the city's big land assembly project.

Council wanted a buffer, and was enthusiastic about provision of low-cost housing, and sent the plan on to the zoning appeal board.

But when the board heard the request, many residents turned up with petitions opposing the project.

The appeal board turned the development down. Council learned Monday the only way to get the plan rolling again, would be to open the zoning bylaw.

This would require going through a lot of red tape, including many public hearings.

Council also learned there are some financial problems with the scheme. Aldermen decided to wait for the report of a planning consultant, before proceeding with zone change.

Green, taxpayer on Chemainus riverbank

'Dam Chemainus River!'

By JEAN MacGREGOR

CHEMAINUS — Reeve Candidate Claude Green has proposed the use of the Chemainus River as an answer to water shortage in the Chemainus area.

Mr. Green has been investigating the idea, and Saturday he took a look at the Chemainus River.

He stated, "For a good many years now we have heard a great deal about water shortages in the world."

"On the North American continent, serious talks are now taking place regarding the feasibility of changing the flow of a number of our Canadian rivers from north to south."

"In a number of instances this is not so insurmountable as one would imagine."

"Already right here in B.C. this has been accomplished by Alcan, when they drilled a tunnel through a mountain and made water flow west instead of its usual eastward source when it would have finally joined up with the Fraser."

Referring to water shortage problems in North Cowichan, Mr. Green said, "Right here in our own district water is and has been a matter of grave concern to a number of localities — in fact, all."

"In Duncan the water situation was always critical in summertime until they found an excellent source underground."

In the south end of the municipality our council has decided to hitch its wagon to the same star, which we hope will prove equally successful."

Mr. Green said in looking at the water resources in the district, his thoughts naturally lead to the Cowichan and Chemainus Rivers.

He stated the Cowichan River already has heavy demands on it, including the village of Lake Cowichan, the city of Duncan, and the Crofton Pulp Mill.

"Therefore our last major source of water not having too many water licences filed on it, is the Chemainus River. It has six in all, and only one that could have a major demand," said Mr. Green.

According to information received from the Water Rights Branch in Victoria, the drainage area of the Che-mainus River is approximately 146 square miles and from records kept the average mean flow in August and September is approximately 7,500,000 gallons per day.

Mr. Green said, "From information on hand it would be quite feasible to erect a dam in the Copper Canyon area, elevation approximately 550 feet, to create a storage basin behind it."

"This is an ideal locality due to the fact that there is little or no habitation west of this location."

"Enough water could be stored to take care of the needs of the district, particularly Chemainus, during the two dry months, and allow the mean flow to continue on down the river."

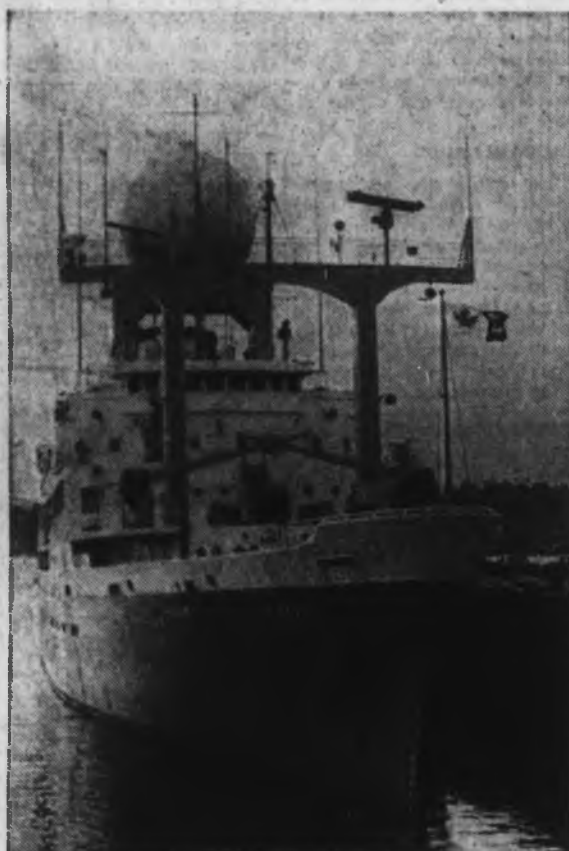

He added this large head of water could then be used to form a grid system to connect up with and supplement all other water schemes within the municipality.

Mr. Green stressed one of his major concerns in putting the idea would be the protection of spawning grounds in the Chemainus River.

He concluded, "In view of the fact that outside interests have already cast eyes at the water potential of the Kok-silah, Cowichan and Chemainus Rivers, I feel it is high time that someone looked to the future and claimed water licences so future generations will be assured of a plentiful supply of the world's most important commodity — water."

Weather ship Quadra

Leaky Quadra Runs Home from Papa

By MARK DICKINSON

The $12,000,000 weather ship Quadra, with 95 aboard, has been dodging tragedy for the past five days, and Monday night coast guard officials were crossing their fingers and hoping she would reach port without further troubles this morning.

The 5,400-ton vessel is suffering leaks in her superstructure, water-damaged electronic controls and a breakdown in one of her three turbo-generators.

And as a result she was forced to leave Station Papa, 800 miles west of Victoria, two days ahead of schedule.

The ship is also running short of fuel for her engines and helium for weather balloons, according to district marine agent Larry Slaght. "We're keeping our fingers crossed," Mr. Slaght said. "We're having more than our fair share of problems."

Threat to the ship's propulsion occurred early Friday when a part of one turbo-generator seized up. But she cut in her standby generator and was still able to develop full power with the two units.

"If one of those two breaks down, the ship could be in really serious trouble," Mr. Slaght said.

A few hours after the engine trouble hit the Quadra,

Friday's storm smashed through her patrol area.

Forty-foot waves and 85-mile-an-hour winds battered the vessel, causing the leaks in her superstructure and sending her more than 150 miles off her station.

The superstructure leaks let water into the electrical control system, but the extent of the damage is not yet known here, Mr. Slaght said.

Because of rough seas, the Quadra was forced to steam westerly into the storm.

"She could not turn around in those waves," he said.

"This caused her to get out of her patrol area and use up a lot of fuel."

He said he did not know the

Insulin Trial Charge:

Husband Hid Dying Wives

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The prosecution in the insulin murder trial of William Dale Archerd charged Monday he hid three of his wives suffering from insulin shock until it was too late to save them.

In the first day of the trial, prosecutor Raymond Daniels also said Archerd was well acquainted with the dangers of insulin because of his work as an attendant in a state mental hospital.

The silver-haired grandfather, 55, is accused of the insulin deaths of two of his seven wives and a 15-year-old nephew by giving them massive injections of the drug normally used in the treatment of diabetes.

He also is a suspect in the alleged insulin deaths of three other persons, including another wife, which occurred outside Los Angeles County.

The prosecution's attempt to prove insulin was the death weapon is the first such legal effort in the United States.

Daniels, in his opening statement to Judge Adolph Alexander who is trying the case without a jury, said Archerd worked in the insulin shock ward at Canarillo State Hospital, and during a period from 1939 to 1941 was taught the dangers of the drug.

The prosecutor also said he intended to display records from the hospital which would show Archerd actually injected the drug into other attendants experimentally.

Daniels said Zella Winders Archerd, 48, the defendant's fourth wife; Juanita Plum Archerd, 46, his fifth wife, and novelist Mary Brinker Post Arden, 60, his seventh wife, were secreted or hidden away

OTTAWA (CP)—A bill that makes marriage breakdown grounds for divorce won enthusiastic first reading in the Commons Monday night.

Adultery, bigamy, physical or mental cruelty, and sodomy, bestiality, rape and homosexuality are listed in the bill as specific grounds.

In addition, either husband or wife when living apart may petition for divorce on the grounds that there has been a permanent breakdown in their marriage.

However, marriage breakdown must be proved in the courts, Justice Minister Trudeau said.

The breakdown must be based on one of the following circumstances:

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than three of the five years prior to the petition;

● The respondent has been imprisoned for not less than two years prior to the petition but on a sentence of death or more than 10 years, with the appeal process exhausted;

● The respondent has for not less than three years before the petition been "grossly addicted to alcohol or a narcotic" without reasonable expectation of rehabilitation;

● The petitioner hasn't heard from or has been unable to locate the partner for three years;

● The petitioner has refused to consummate the marriage or has been unable to because of illness or disability for at least one year;

● The couple has been separated for at least five years because of desertion of the petitioner;

The couple has been separated for any other reason for not less than three years.

'Nothing Moving'

Record Snowfall Hits Fredericton

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fredericton was crippled with record 25 inches of snow Monday, while other sections of New Brunswick escaped with a less severe pounding from a province-wide storm.

"There's nothing moving here except a few damn fools," said a member of the Fredericton police department.

The police spokesman said snow removal would probably not get started until early today.

RCMP said their cars would remain off roads Monday night unless there was an emergency.

BOY KILLED

One person was known to have died as a result of the storm. Five-year-old Michael McGraw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valmond McGraw of the Gloucester County community of Losier Settlement, died when he stepped into the path of a car on a storm-swept highway near his home.

Air Canada cancelled all flights there and at Saint John.

Negroes Held Hostage

DETROIT (AP) — A distraught Negro whose son was killed during Detroit's summer race riot armed himself Monday and held two women, one of them pregnant, and three children as hostages in his home.

Police surrounded the home of Eugene Ector, who they said had fired several shots before they arrived.

William Watson, a retired Detroit policeman, said he spoke with Ector on the phone.

REMINDERS

"The sight of the police cars upset him," said Watson, 50, a veteran of 25 years on the police force. "He said 'they remind me of my son.'"

Ector's son, Herman, 30, was shot and killed on July 24, one of the 43 persons who died in the July race riot. Murder charges were filed against a private guard in connection with the shooting of the younger Ector.

Some 30 policemen surrounded Ector's home and ordered cars in the area to turn off their lights. No lights were visible in Ector's house.

Patient's Wife Saw Accident

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—The wife of heart transplant man Louis Washkansky paused to watch a highway accident Saturday without knowing the heart of one of the victims would be used for her husband.

By a strange twist of fate, Mrs. Washkansky saw the accident that killed 25-year-old Denise Ann Darvall whose heart was used by surgeons shortly after she died in the historic transplant operation.

Mrs. Washkansky was on her way home Saturday from the Grootte Schuur Hospital here after visiting her husband.

Montreal May Be Next

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Arthur Vineberg, a well-known Montreal heart specialist, said Monday the Cape Town heart transplant has "a very good chance of success" and predicts the operation may be tried here soon.
